MOUNTING LIST OF U. S. LAWS IS TAXING COURTS

222,738 Cases Load for Last Year.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A stern warning against enactment of further statutes that "project the federal government into the handling of the crime situation" was sounded by Attorney General William D. Mitchell during testimony before the house appropriations committee.

Mr. Mitchell pointed to the rapid growth of federal, civil, and criminal prosecutions in recent years. In 1910 he stated, the federal government handled 46,705 proceedings in the district courts. By 1920 that total had grown to 91,254, and in 1932 it reached a peak of 222,738.

Steady Growth Cited.

The steady growth of the federal government's jurisdiction in criminal and civil cases, said the attorney general, began with the enactment starting about 1910 of a number of statutes which made offenses previously under state jurisdiction a matter for the federal government. In response to a question from Representative George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] as to what laws brought about the enormous growth of federal, civil, and criminal proceedings, the attorney general replied:

"From memory, I think the turn in the tide took place back in 1910 with the enactment of such laws as the Harrison narcotic statute, which is nominally a tax statute but actually directed to restrictions in the drug traffic, laws like the Dyer act and the Mann act, and a variety of statutes of that type.

"There has been constant progression in the use of the power over interstate commerce and taxation to take the federal government into the field of criminal law."

Increase Is Opposed.

Representative Tinkham asked Mr. Mitchell if it was his belief that the "policy of congress ought to be not to increase these federal jurisdictions."

"I am thoroughly convinced of that," replied the attorney general, "and I think the more we do it the more we centralize authority and create federal expense and federal bureaus and weaken state authority.

"I am thoroughly a believer in not enlarging the scope of federal activity any more than we have to," continued Mr. Mitchell. "The trouble is that we talk about economy and about reducing federal bureaus and federal expenses and all that, and in the next breath we talk about projecting the central government into handling the crime situation and into business by controlling this, that, or the other great business activity, and of having bureaus and commissions standing around supervising this, that, or the other, and the two things do not go together.

Favors Local Action.

"I think that we ought to hold down the projection of the federal government into the prosecution of public offenses as far as we can and stimulate the local governments to handle that work. You are never going to correct the crime situation in this country by having Washington jump in, under the anti-trust laws or the income tax laws or under the power over interstate commerce, and clean up the gangster rule in our municipalities. Unless we can stimulate public opinion to get the right kind of men in our local governments and to see that they do their duty and clean up those conditions, they will not be cleaned up."

DRY TOLL 22 LIVES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Enforcement of the national liquor laws cost the lives of thirteen citizens and nine federal agents during the fiscal year 1932, according to testimony by Prohibition Administrator Amos W. W. Woodcock before the house appropriations committee. In addition, the dry head stated, six other agents have been killed in line of duty since the fiscal year ended on June 30.

Mr. Woodcock's testimony during the hearing was punctuated by questions from Representative Thomas L. Blanton [Dem., Tex.], an ardent dry. Mr. Blanton asked whether the enforcement of the liquor laws was becoming more hazardous.

"There is the 'act,'" replied the prohibition director, "but the number o

EXPECT CUTTING TO GET INTERIOR JOB IN CABINET

He and La Follette Visit Roosevelt.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

Warm Springs, Ga., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Bronson Cutting, rich six footer senator from New Mexico, a rebel from Republicanism, will be the Roosevelt secretary of the interior, it appeared most likely tonight.

Senator Cutting and his radical colleague, Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, arrived here this evening and were the first visitors at the Roosevelt "Little White House" on the summit of Pine mountain.

President Elect Roosevelt, who arrived this morning for a two weeks' rest at this refuge for paralytics he established in these Georgia pine woods, secluded himself from all other callers, including the band of newspaper men who followed him down here. He sent out no explanation of the visit of the two radical senators who dined with him this evening.

Picks Cutting Over La Follette.

Mr. Roosevelt is known to have determined to reward the radicals who deserted the Republican party to support his campaign with at least one cabinet post and with a share of the patronage spoils in their respective states.

Both Senator Cutting and Senator La Follette still hold their seats in the senate. Mr. Roosevelt is said to have considered that Cutting would be much more acceptable to the conservative Roosevelt supporters than La Follette. At the same time the Cutting appointment probably would satisfy the radical members of both parties who stood behind the Roosevelt banner.

The New Mexico senator, a Harvard classmate of Mr. Roosevelt, is not a native westerner, is cultured, keen minded, and he speaks with a broad Harvard accent which, when he first came to the senate, led some to ticket him as "uppity." He is a New Englander by birth, and went west some twenty years ago when he was stricken with tuberculosis.

Active in Indian Affairs.

Cured in the high and dry climate of Santa Fé, Mr. Cutting elected to make his permanent home there. He is a millionaire, publishes a newspaper in Santa Fé, and has many varied commercial interests there.

He has been strongly active in Indian affairs, and because of his knowledge of government properties in the west he is considered by the Roosevelt advisers to be well qualified for the interior portfolio.

The reason for the visit of Cutting and La Follette to Warm Springs released a flood of speculation, since both men conferred with the President elect just three three days ago in Washington.

Just before they left Warm Springs tonight Senator La Follette said that the chief subject at the conference had been his half billion dollar idle relief bill. He said that Mr. Roosevelt gave himself and Senator Cutting a "most attentive hearing" and that his general attitude was "very gratifying." Senator La Follette announced that he would press for action on his bill at this session of congress.

Bolted Own Party.

Both senators denied that the new administration's cabinet had been discussed at the conference.

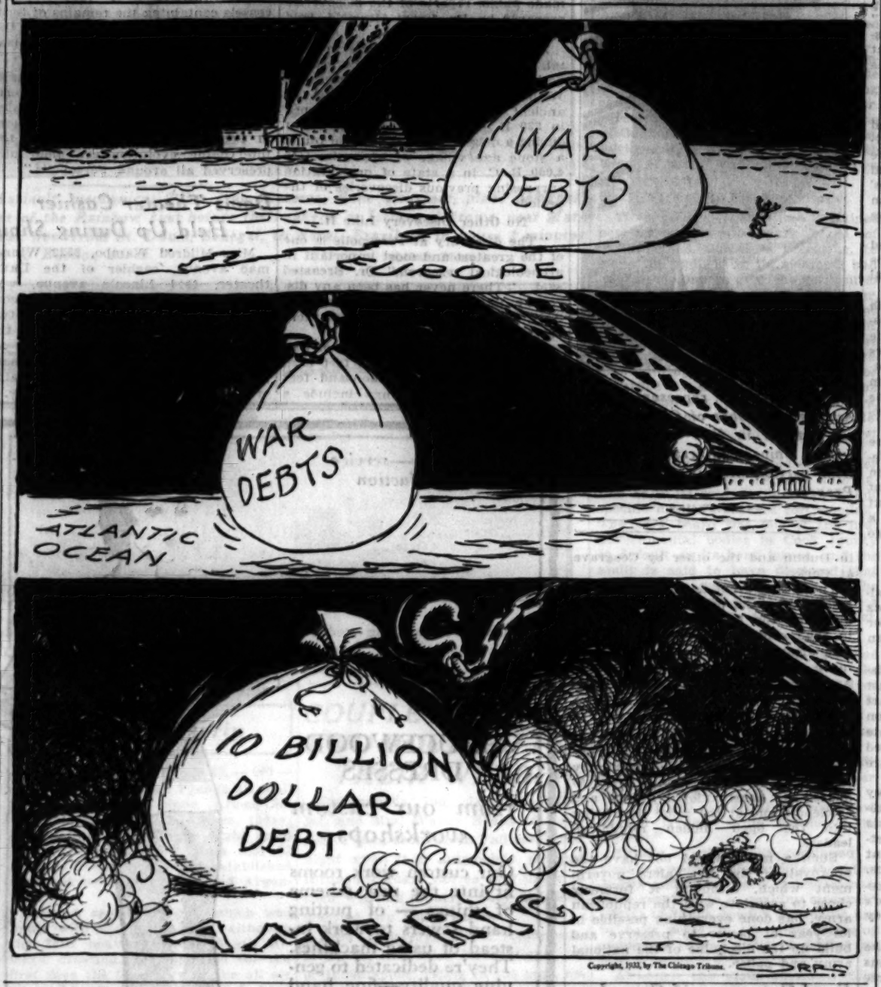
Senator Cutting bolted the Republican party in his state at the height of the presidential campaign. He was succeeded by former Congressman Albert Gallatin Simms for national committeeman and then organized a complete state ticket under a progressive label. This ticket was withdrawn, however, after Mr. Roosevelt in a speech in New Mexico praised Senator Cutting, and then the senator and his following all went Democratic, helping carry New Mexico for Roosevelt.

MRS. ROOSEVELT IS HOME AFTER TRIP TO CHICAGO

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt arrived at Grand Central terminal at 10:10 p. m. tonight from a trip to Chicago.

No one met her, and the first lady-to-be gave her small overnight bag to a red cap like any other passenger, walked through the station to the taxicab stand, and drove home.

THE GREAT ENGINEERING PROJECT



CERMAK MISSES BEING HELD UP BY 3 MINUTES

Mayor Cermak missed being in a robbery by a few minutes yesterday. He walked from the Congress hotel to the Morrison hotel, where he had a conference with Gov. Horner, and on the way stopped at a candy shop at 29 East Jackson boulevard, where he bought several boxes of candy for out of town friends, leaving his cards to be inclosed.

Miss Alice Wallo, 1549 Sedgwick street, the clerk, reported to police that two or three minutes after the mayor left a man entered, drew a pistol, and ordered her into a back room. Instead, she said, she screamed, and the bandit ran out.

Several persons on the street, hearing Miss Wallo's screams, pursued the bandit south in Wabash avenue until he jumped into an automobile and escaped.

FESS FORESEES BUSINESS GAIN IN NEW REGIME

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Belief that signs of economic recovery would appear when the new administration takes over the reins of government and announced its policies was expressed here today by Senator Fess of Ohio, who made an annual visit to Lancaster with a "report" on national affairs.

Senator Fess warned, however, that under present conditions of uncertainty almost any proposal of economic tampering, regardless of merits, might be adopted if supported and advocated by strong leadership.

A Bug Hunter Gets Stepped On by City

For those who desire more knowledge of Daphnia or water fleas, Bob Becker, in a story in the sports section discusses them in detail, telling their importance in the cultivation of fish life.

The city's new dumping ground in the unused canal between Western and Damen avenues near 32d street has upset things considerably in goldfish circles, it became known yesterday. Tropical fish and other rare forms of aquatic life in Chicago aquariums faced a food shortage as a result of the establishment of the new dump, and daphnia hunters mourned the loss of their happy hunting grounds.

Known as Water Fleas.

Daphnia are not insects but small members of the crab family. Charles Kemp, who makes his living catching them below his river shack on the canal bank near Western avenue, calls them "water fleas," which is their correct common name.

Old Charles catches them because the fish fanciers consider water fleas the most beneficial food on a tropical fish's menu, and one of the rarest. The canal is about the only place known about Chicago where these water fleas thrive. But the fish fanciers will be no more seriously affected by the city's plan to fill in the old canal bed which means the end of the daphnia than Old Charles, who now faces the humiliation of asking for county aid.

Charles Sees the End.

Charles paused outside his shack in the cold mist yesterday to listen to the chugging of the city trucks across the water. He silenced two barking dogs, his protection against thieves. Then he took his corncob pipe from his teeth and observed:

"They're coming closer. It won't be long now before the canal will be filled clean across to this bank. Look at those ashes tumbling into the water. That makes lye and kills the water fleas. I haven't been able to catch any for two days and I've had to put up signs, 'No more fleas for sale,' so the people from the aquariums won't expect any more."

The decision to use the canal bed as a dumping ground was reached several weeks ago after a strike of laborers at paid dumping grounds threatened to tie up city rubbish removal service.

LAWYER SILENT ON REYNOLDS 'MEMORIAL FUND'

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—B. S. Womble, attorney for the Reynolds family, refused today to comment on published reports that the major portion of the late Smith Reynolds' share of his father's tobacco fortune will be used to establish a memorial philanthropic fund.

Womble said he had read the report, but he would not discuss it.

The Greensboro News today said it had learned from a "reliable source" that an agreement now being negotiated provides that Smith Reynolds' two children by different wives each receive $2,000,000 and the remainder of the fortune be devoted to public purposes. It estimated the total at about $19,000,000.

Reynolds' children are Anne Cannon Reynolds II., two year old daughter of his first wife, and the infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds, the former Broadway singer.

A month ago Fred Harry, 36 years old, of 6348 Drexel avenue, a salesman, and his wife, Elizabeth, 37, separated. Yesterday Mrs. Harry and a friend, Virgil Baum, 35, of 6502 Drexel avenue, called upon him. A bottle of liquor was produced, and later the estranged couple and Baum visited Harry's apartment neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cater. The drinking continued.

Baum proposed a toast. The glasses were filled. Harry disappeared with his glass but soon returned and drank from it. He immediately collapsed. A physician was summoned. He pronounced Harry dead from carbolic acid poisoning. Police believe that Harry killed himself in despondency over his separation. They are holding Mrs. Harry and Baum for the inquest.

LOOP IS JARRED BY BOMB BLAST IN HAND LAUNDRY

The south end of the loop was jarred this morning by a bomb explosion at the front entrance of the French Model Hand laundry and cleaning and dyeing establishment at 406 South Clark street. Scores of guests in near-by hotels were awakened.

Damage was confined to the front. The window was smashed and the front door was broken. Some damage was done to the dyeing plant next door at 404 South Clark street. The loss amounted to $450, police estimated.

Harry Rattner, 911 East 50th street, owner of the business, said he was mystified by the bombing. Police said that the windows of his place had been broken three or four times by vandals in recent months. No witnesses to the bombing were found.

Depression Gets a Hold on Kidnaping

When William Grossman was kidnaped last Tuesday night it was announced by the kidnapers that the price of his release would be $50,000.

Mr. Grossman is 42 years old and has been regarded as the friend, associate, and confidant of "Dago Lawrence" Mangano and other important west side hoodlums, bootleggers, and others accustomed to discuss money in large terms and with extreme casualness.

Among the enterprises in which Mr. Grossman is believed to be interested along with Messrs. Mangano, James Aducci, a public enemy, and William Bioff, are taxi dance halls and some houses of ill-fame. The kidnapers are thought by the police to have determined that $50,000 ought to be swiftly forthcoming.

They Apply to Brother Phil.

The first application for the $50,000 was made to Phil Grossman, owner of a café. Phil, who is William's brother, had the misfortune some years ago to be sentenced to a year in the Bridewell for some infraction of the liquor law. But he never went there. Through the offices of his friend Homer Galpin he was pardoned by President Coolidge while he was still taking the air in West Madison street.

Phil didn't think he cared to do anything about the ransom for his brother William. He didn't think William was in any special danger and besides he didn't like to be seen talking to the police.

The kidnapers became quite insistent. They mentioned a number of painful and embarrassing things that could happen to William if the $50,000 didn't come across. The person to whom these demands were presented said he thought in these times that whatever happened to William would be cheaper than $50,000.

So It Comes to $25,000.

"Well, how about $25,000?" said the kidnaper, always willing to take a depression view of the matter. "I'll go back and see if the gang is willing to take twenty-five."

The gang evidently was willing, according to the drift of gossip which came to the police. The tempting offer was laid before William's friends. But William's close pals had thought it over, too. Twenty-five thousand dollars is a lot of money, was their decision, and William would have to suffer quite a lot to offset such a sum.

"Well," came the kidnapers' message, "how about making it $5,000? It ought to be worth that much."

They Set Out for $5,000.

So William's friends started out after $5,000. A few years ago $5,000 would have been cigaret money. They broached the first speakeasy keeper for $3,000. He gazed blankly at the boys and said that if he had $3,000 he would pay the French debt and become a national hero. William's friends softly requested $1,000 of the next divekeeper. This gentleman said he'd love to help William out of his fix, but the best he could offer was love and kisses. And besides, what could the kidnapers do to William in these times that would make him any worse off?

"That's the way it is," said one of William's friends who had been solicited. "I don't understand these kidnapers. You could do a lot with $5,000 these days, and Bill never was $5,000 worth unless I'm thinking of somebody else. I'd say them kidnapers is lucky if they collect Bill's board money since last Tuesday, and if they don't let him go pretty soon he'll eat 'em out of house and home."

At last reports $5,000 was still the figure.

What to do about the depression? Should it be let alone to work itself out, or should steps be taken to aid recovery? If so, what steps?

Reuben D. Cahn of the Tribune staff, in a series of ten articles starting today in the Financial Section, examines the attitudes of economists, financiers, and other leaders on these questions and presents the views of each in a separate article.

HITLER'S ARMY BATTLES REDS; POLICE SHOOT

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—Ninety-one persons were injured, 31 seriously, in clashes between communists and police and conflicts between communists and Adolf Hitler's National Socialists in connection with today's Nazi military demonstration in the heart of Berlin's Red district.

Persons in this district insist that they witnessed the deaths of two persons, but police deny any one was killed. The government, the Nazis, and the communists all claimed they had been victorious.

Nazis Are Elated.

The government declared that the "manner in which the police handled the situation strengthened the state authority." The Nazis were equally elated. They said:

"Today we showed the communists that we are not afraid to march in their own haunts and that the day is near when we will wipe them out."

The communists were also jubilant, stating that "our friends showed perfect discipline in the face of the Nazi provocation which deprives the government of a pretext for prohibiting the party; furthermore the fact that the entire police force was compelled to turn out to protect Hitler's warriors made these reactionaries look ridiculous in the eyes of great parts of the population."

At 10 o'clock this morning the square in front of the Karl Liebknecht house, the Red headquarters in Buelow platz, and all adjoining streets were cleared by the police. Heavy cordons of police, reinforced by armored cars and riot cars, were stationed near by.

18,000 March in Uniform.

Eighteen thousand uniformed Nazis with field kitchens and brass bands assembled in front of the Red headquarters. They carried the soviet hammer and sickle banners.

Hitler and his lieutenants, including Prince August Wilhelm, son of the former kaiser, all in full regalia, spoke at the unveiling of a monument in Nikolai cemetery over the grave of Horst Wessel, a Nazi student who was killed several years ago by communists and has been immortalized in Nazi battle hymns.

Wessel was one of the many youthful victims of the hysterical political hatred preached by leaders of both radical parties, the Nazis and communists. Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm and the Steel Helmet organization of war veterans also sent wreaths to the grave.

Nazi songs of revenge and death to all enemies echoed through the streets in which the Hitlerites paraded. In some districts the population turned against them, but police quickly interfered, using firearms to disperse the crowds.

Police Disperse Reds.

Maria Evoguen, concert singer, was one of the indirect victims of the Nazi demonstration. Her noon recital at a theater on Buelow platz was sold out, but only 300 music lovers succeeded in breaking through the police lines and dared to venture on the scene of the Nazi demonstration.

Disorders also were reported in Leipzig and Cologne, where police fired into a crowd. Two communists were seriously wounded at Cologne.

Hitler Rides in Limousine.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—(AP)—While Adolf Hitler, leader of the National Socialists, rode safely in a high powered limousine to and from a Nazi demonstration today, there was bloodshed on the streets.

The communists, who bitterly opposed the demonstration, reported that one of their number had been killed, but refused further information.

Arrests in connection with the affair had swelled to 86 tonight. During the demonstration numerous Nazis were waylaid by their opponents and the big Alexander platz had to be cleared when menacing crowds grew to huge proportions. In breaking up nineteen attempted communist processions, police were obliged to shoot in self-defense. Four officers were injured, one seriously.

The communists tried to block the streets with burning mattresses and with garbage cans, and did succeed in blocking Kolonnen strasse bridge.

The prologue of today's demonstration was a night of disorders in which one woman was injured when shots were fired on a communist meeting place.

Hitler was well protected during the demonstration. Armed police every few paces for miles guarded the route of the march, crowding shivering protesters into side streets, where the shabby, hungry crowds, constituting a second demonstration, contrasted strikingly with the trim Nazi storm troops, which were given the right of way.

Hitler tonight was the center of an impressive memorial ceremony which caused a jamming of the Sportpalast where a life size picture of Horst Wessel, the Nazi national hero who was killed by communists several years ago, was mounted high. Hitler closed his speech with the words "We pray almighty God to give us the same strength of spirit and self-sacrifice that characterized our martyrs."

Steel Helmets Hear Papen.

MAGDEBURG, Germany, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Franz von Papen, former chancellor, the chief speaker today at an anniversary of the founding of the Steel Helmets, vehemently denied that he was a "slave of capitalism."

Emphasizing that he was nonpartisan politically, he said: "Above all I hate big international capital shifted anonymously here and there."

JILTED CHICAGO MAN SEEKS TO INDICT BEAUTY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 22.—Declaring himself duped of $100,000 in six years, Sydney Horner, retired Chicago business man and brother of Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, will ask a Budapest grand jury this week to indict a Hungarian beauty upon charges of swindling him. The woman, Mrs. Clara Tanner, wife of a Budapest business man, promised to get a divorce and marry him, according to Horner, who is now a resident of Paris.

Encouraged by these promises, he gave her jewels and money, Horner said. He made his will in her favor and prepared to make her his bride. But instead she went back to her husband, who forgave her for her romance with Horner, and the American instructed his Budapest lawyer, Dr. Paul Auer, to take criminal action against her.

Horner met Mrs. Tanner six years ago at a party in the Grand hotel, Vienna, he said, and since then they have toured European capitals together. He deposited $10,000 in her name in a Paris bank, bought her $30,000 worth of jewels, and gave her other moneys, Horner said. The woman, questioned yesterday by Budapest's district attorney, admitted the generosity of Horner but insisted she did not promise to marry him.

HORNER, CERMAK AND NASH CONFER ON STATE JOBS

Gov. Horner, Mayor Cermak, and Chairman Patrick Nash of the Cook county Democratic committee, conferred here yesterday on state appointments, spending the afternoon and early evening in the bungalow on the Morrison hotel.

After the meeting Gov. Horner said many names had been submitted for members of his cabinet and for important state positions, but that he was not ready to announce any appointments. He will await recommendations from downstate Democratic organizations, he said, before deciding definitely on the men who will fill the key positions of his administration.

"I am subordinating patronage matters to the problems of the mining districts," Gov. Horner said. "The troubles at the mines prevent my giving more time now to the selection of the state officials whom I must appoint."

KILLED IN FALL FROM ROOF.

Raymond Tolerski, 41 years old, 2740 West 23d street, was killed yesterday when he fell from the roof of the Western Shade Cloth company plant at Jefferson and 22d streets while making some repairs.

IRISH BREAK UP COSGRAVE RALLY; 50 HURT IN RIOT

Police Charge Mob with Drawn Batons.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 22.—Rioting broke up a rally for former President William T. Cosgrave at Tralee in County Kerry tonight. Fifty persons were injured.

The disorders occurred shortly after Cosgrave arose to speak. His voice was drowned out by shouts of "Up De Valera!" and "Up the republic!" A shower of stones followed and Cosgrave, leading opponent of President De Valera at Tuesday's elections, was forced to end his speech.

Stone Cosgrave's Auto.

The De Valera followers hurled stones at Cosgrave's automobile. Several other cars were stoned. Two were overturned by the rioters, who grappled with members of the Army Comrades' association, on hand to act as an escort for Cosgrave and to preserve the right of free speech.

Time and again the police charged the fighting crowd with drawn batons and order was not restored for several hours.

At Listowel police fought with disturbers who tried to prevent a Cosgrave rally, while in Dublin a hostile crowd gathered around loud speakers at Cosgrave's headquarters and attempted to prevent an audience from listening. Police drew their batons and the crowd dispersed in all directions.

Meanwhile, political observers are agreed that the fate of Ireland depends upon the decision taken between now and election day by 400,000 silent voters. The electorate totals about 1,750,000, but in the last election a year ago, 400,000 persons did not go to the polls.

Both Sides Claim Votes.

The result was so close it was almost a tie, and De Valera only was able to keep his precarious power for less than a year with the help of seven Labor party members.

If any one is to have a really satisfactory victory on Tuesday, he must get these 400,000 votes or a large part of them. It seems to be agreed on both sides that the abstainers will vote this time. No efforts are being spared to get them to the polls and they are claimed by both parties.

Cosgrave's adherents declare they are mostly "men and women of substance," including many old Unionists or Irish nationalists who were disgusted by the civil war and the subsequent squabbling and dropped out of politics. These people, according to the Cosgraveites, will vote for Cosgrave's Cumann na nGaedheal party if they vote at all.

De Valera's supporters declare the abstainers are patriotic republicans who refused to recognize the Free State even by taking part in its elections, but that this time they will vote for De Valera as a step toward establishing a republic.

Result a Tossup.

As election day approaches it is becoming more and more difficult to get any one to commit himself to a prophecy of the result. Opinions vary. One shrewd political observer today said that he thought Frank MacDermot's Center party would win 15 to 20 seats in the dail, which, together with what Cosgrave is certain of, will enable the latter to form a strong government.

Cosgrave leaders talk of winning by six or seven seats, while Fianna Fail, De Valera's party, talks of winning by a dozen members. Both claims are probably exaggerated, but indications, if any, seem to be that Cosgrave will win with the help of MacDermot.

Dublin was deserted today by campaign workers, orators, and candidates. They were all in the country speaking at churches, parish halls, and on open hillsides. They will continue the same tactics tomorrow, when the campaign closes with two monster meetings, one by De Valera in Dublin and the other by Cosgrave at Cork.

There is a great deal of anxiety in Dublin over the possibility of a coup d'état by the Irish Republican army in the event of a Cosgrave victory. The army hotheads may try such a move, but officers of the National army claim it would last less than 24 hours.

Army Ready for Coup.

As a matter of fact many officers would like to see the republican army attempt to take the government by force as it would enable the army to display its constitutional loyalty and efficiency, and at the same time bring into the open hidden republican leaders.

Such a move would not have the approval of the De Valera government which, although it formerly chose to associate with the republican army, has done everything possible in its year of power to preserve and build up the discipline of the national army and police.

U. OF C. REPORT REVEALS LIFE OF 6,000 YEARS AGO

Persian Find Held Most Important Ever Made.

Two chapters in the epic of human progress have been sifted from the dust of centuries by the Persian expedition of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. James Henry Breasted, director, yesterday made public reports of the discoveries prepared by Dr. Ernst Herzfeld, field director of the expedition.

At Persepolis, ancient Persian capital, the expedition has uncovered a series of magnificent sculptures. Within two miles of the ruins of the ancient palaces, which were burned in 330 B. C. by Alexander the Great during a debauch, the expedition found a stone age village of approximately 4,000 B. C. in a state of preservation surpassing previous discoveries of the period.

No Other Discovery Like It.

"The discovery at Persepolis is one of the greatest and most important in archeological research," Dr. Breasted said. "There never has been any discovery like it anywhere in western Asia, since excavations began there 100 years ago."

The expedition found a series of wall relief sculptures five or six feet high and totaling almost a thousand feet in length. The carvings include a series of historical inscriptions of importance. The walls of the palaces, overlooking a wide plain circled by mountains, were of sun dried brick, while the colonade halls, windows, and great doors were of black stone, polished like ebony.

On these black stones is carved a magnificent conclave of Persian and Median officials, with the emperor drawn up to receive ambassadors of twenty-one subject nations. Execution of the scenes, Dr. Hersfeld reported, displays remarkable beauty and detail.

Original Colors Faded.

Originally the scenes were embellished with color, but only one of the fragments has so been preserved. This represents the emperor wearing a robe of scarlet and purple and other finery in royal hues.

The stone age village was uncovered beneath a mound some 300 by 600 feet in area. Walls of the adobe houses are preserved in places to a height of seven feet. There is a narrow street extending the length of the settlement. Walls are decorated with crude murals in red ochre and in the interiors are utensils. Some pottery vessels containing the remains of food and flint knives with which the ancient people had eaten their last meals.

"Such remains," Dr. Breasted said, "disclose to us the earliest prehistoric ancestry of the civilization which reached its culmination in the palaces at Persepolis. The evidences of the intervening evolution are plentifully preserved all around Persepolis."

Davis Theater Cashier Held Up During Show

Miss Mildred Wambo, 2522 Winnemac avenue, cashier of the Davis theater, 4614 Lincoln avenue, was forced to turn over $110, the contents of the cash drawer, by two armed men who stepped up to the cage last night. They escaped in an automobile driven by a third man. None of the patrons in the theater or lobby was aware of the robbery.

DENSE N. Y. FOG CAUSES MISHAPS TO TWO VESSELS

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A dense fog covered New York harbor this afternoon, delaying ferryboats and causing two accidents. The Ward liner Orizaba, bound in from Havana, lost her way and crashed into the pier at Montague street, Brooklyn. The vessel anchored in the East river and was compelled by the fog to remain there for the night. Her passengers had to remain aboard as baggage will not be inspected before morning.

So far as the police were able to learn no one was injured in the crash.

The Staten island ferryboat Tompkinsville, Manhattan bound from St. George, narrowly escaped a collision with an excursion boat and a customs cutter that loomed in her path and drifted into the seawall. The ferryboat was undamaged but there was excitement among the 1,100 passengers.

CHEAPER MONEY BY USING SILVER URGED BY BORAH

Rainey Also Favorable to Proposal.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The movement for inflation—or reflation as it is coming to be called—received impetus today from two influential quarters.

Senator William E. Borah [radical, Idaho], prominent advocate of the remonetization of silver, declared cheaper money the prime necessity of the hour not only to stabilize the prices of commodities at home but to protect our domestic market from the inroads of the producers of counties that have gone off the gold standard.

To balance the federal budget, Senator Borah contended, it is first going to be necessary to "balance the budget of the taxpayers" by raising commodity prices. Until that is done, the piling on of more taxes in the effort to balance the budget will merely keep us traveling "the vicious circle toward economic collapse."

Rainey for "Cheaper Money."

Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader of the house, pronounced cheaper money one of the essentials of recovery. He does not look for any legislation to that end in the remaining weeks of this congress, but expects the remonetization of silver to be voted at the extraordinary session of the new congress in the spring. The leading alternative to silver legislation, in his opinion, is the Busby bill for the issuance of 3 billion dollars of currency secured by government bonds.

"The remonetization of silver would create a larger supply of money and would cause the prices of commodities to go up," said Mr. Rainey. "That would not be inflation because it would be creating a money that has value. Silver can be melted up for use in the arts. If you melt up currency the money is gone. I would favor the coinage of silver at a fixed ratio to gold—not necessarily 16 to 1.

"We could make silver money redeemable in gold and not lose anything. We would be coining a money which is the primary medium of exchange of more than half the world. In such countries the American milled dollar would become an international monetary standard.

Three Measures for Recovery.

"There are three measures in my opinion that would produce an economic upturn—the remonetization of silver, farm relief and the legalization of beer. Farm relief, I believe, will take the form either of the domestic allotment plan or the Clair plan for fixing the price of every agricultural product.

"Few people realize the enormous economic benefit that would accrue from the legalization of beer. There are only 123 breweries now and 1,100 would be needed. To provide new breweries and expand those in existence would require 450 million dollars of construction in the first 12 months. Then there would be the impetus of business and employment resulting from the expansion of the barrel, bottle and numerous other ancillary industries.

"Agriculture would benefit not only from the barley, corn, and rice used for beer, but from the withdrawal of lands from the production of legumes for planting to malting crops. This would tend to reduce the surpluses from which farmers are suffering."

Affects Budget Balancing.

Senator Borah said it is impossible to balance the budget and keep it balanced so long as commodity prices and purchasing power continue at their present low level.

"The question of balancing the budget is again being urged," Senator Borah said. "I venture the opinion that the budget will not and cannot be balanced except on paper, and that briefly, either now or under the incoming administration, until we settle the currency question. It cannot be done any more than you can build a house upon a receding sand bar.

"With commodity prices near the bottom and still slowly falling, with the purchasing power of the masses near the minimum and still diminishing, with taxes increasing in amount but diminishing in returns, with the value of the dollar depreciating and mortgages and taxes responding accordingly, there is no such thing as balancing the budget except on paper and temporarily.

"The proposal has been made to cut government expenses 500 million dollars. That is a wise proposal. It is then proposed to raise 500 million dollars by increase of taxes, the sales tax. That is a cruel proposal in the light of diminishing profits, falling prices, and decrease of purchasing power. At a time when underconsumption is a malady which menaces our whole social structure, there can be no justification for aggravating the malady.

"If we cannot stabilize prices, to lay on a sales tax which strikes at those least able to pay is to accentuate the fall in prices and discourage and decrease purchasing power. We are traveling in a vicious circle toward economic collapse.

"In 1929 the national income was about $85,200,000,000; in 1932, about $37,500,000,000. Our national income now is about equal to the taxes of the people, city, state, and national, together with the interest falling due on private indebtedness. We have already reached the point when, measured against interest and taxes, the income of the nation is about zero.

Not Wise, He Asserts.

"To put a tax on the poorer people until we have done something to raise and stabilize the prices of commodities is not wise from an economic standpoint, and, socially, it is an iniquity."

As the only major power except France which still remains on the gold standard, Senator Borah declared, there is added to the economic distress in the United States competition from foreign countries where abandonment of the gold standard has produced cheaper costs of production.

To bring down the comparative value of the American dollar, he asserted, was the only means of meeting this competition.

"At the present time," said the Idaho senator, "we are on the gold standard in this country. The rest of the world, except France, which, owing to certain reasons not necessary to discuss here, does not affect greatly our situation, is on a managed currency basis. While our dollar climbs in value their currency is accommodated to their economic situation. The result is that we are not only losing our foreign markets but we are losing our domestic markets.

Domestic Business Suffers.

"Important lines of business are actually being closed because they cannot compete in the markets with the products coming in and deluging our home markets from countries on a cheaper currency basis. The fish business on the Pacific coast is being literally ruined. The countries off the gold standard are literally taking over the fish industry.

"The farmer also is feeling the effect of the competition in the same way. Other important lines of industry feel the effect of it. To talk about balancing the budget and laying on heavier taxes without any accompanying program to meet this situation is to invite further depression, further distress, if not something worse.

"It is going to be difficult—and I believe impossible—to balance the budget, certainly to keep it balanced, until you balance the budget of the taxpayers. Is there any way to bring about the latter until you devise a plan for increasing the prices of commodities? Is there any way to do that except through reflation, through adjustment of the money problem?"

AT ANY RATE, THESE THREE LITTLE WORDS WIND UP THE SAME

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Three words are being bandied about just now by the lawyers, farmers, ward committeemen, and others who are sent to Washington as senators and representatives to solve the nation's fiscal and other problems.

They are "inflation," "deflation," and lastly, "reflation." For those who cannot make their bank balance come out even or approximately so, THE TRIBUNE asked experts for advice. The three words mean:

"INFLATION—The expansion of the volume of money or credit or both more rapidly than is needed by business. There was such inflation to greater or less degree in every country during the war. The inflationist movement was begun by the government in the financing of the war, but it was continued by the American business world after the war had ended.

"The expansion of the volume of credit during and after the war decreased the value of money. There was more of it, hence a dollar was worth less than before in the amount of goods it would purchase. It took more dollars to purchase a given commodity, that is the price of the commodity went up. Inflation is always reflected by raising prices and for that reason inflation is now being advocated in order to restore prices to the level they had reached before the depression, 1926 being the year most generally favored for this purpose.

"DEFLATION—The contraction of the volume of money or credit or both. The depression is a period of deflation. Deflation increases the value of money. There is less money, hence the dollar is more valuable than before in terms of the amount of goods it will purchase. It will purchase more of a given commodity than before; that is, the price of the commodity has gone down.

"But it must be kept in mind that you inflate the money. You also automatically deflate it. The more money and credit created, the less their value and the higher the price of commodities they buy.

"REFLATION—A term not in the dictionary. It was invented to take the curse off inflation. Various schemes of inflation are being proposed to check deflation and start prices of commodities back toward their level before deflation sent them downward. It is contended that the higher level was the normal one and all that is now sought is to restore that level. If prices were to be pushed above that level, it would be inflation, it is explained. But to restore the level is merely to reinflate a deflated thing."

French Flyers Land in Argentina After Record Crossing

7,500 Mile Trip

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Jean Mermoz, veteran French air mail pilot, landed his plane Arc-en-Ciel [Rainbow] here at 11:44 a. m. today, terminating a 7,500 mile flight from Istres, France, in 54 hours and 33 minutes flying time, which established a record between France and Argentina.

Mermoz said the flight, which was made with six companions, although the 24th heavier-than-air South Atlantic crossing, demonstrated for the first time the feasibility of the all-air air mail route which the French Aero Postale company intends to inaugurate shortly. Mermoz, who left Istres Jan. 12, averaged almost 140 miles per hour in the air with a heavy plane. It was his second South Atlantic crossing.

The outstanding achievement of the flight, Mermoz said, was the hop from St. Louis, Senegal to Natal, Brazil, of 14 hours and 2 minutes, which proved that Africa is within an easy daylight air trip from South America. He was delayed for five days at Rio de Janeiro because of a muddy landing field.

DEERFIELD MAY HAVE ITS WATER SUPPLY CUT OFF

The village of Deerfield is faced with a shut off of its water supply furnished by Highland Park. On Saturday Judge Ralph Dady at Waukegan dismissed an injunction which for more than a year had restrained Highland Park from cutting off the service. At the same time he allowed Deerfield fifteen days in which to appeal to the Appellate court, ruling that the injunction should remain in effect for that period.

The dispute arises over a water bill of $20,456 which Highland Park claims is owed by Deerfield. "If Deerfield doesn't pay, we'll cut off its water supply," said Corporation Counsel E. S. Gail of Highland Park last night.

COUPLE DROWNS TWO HOURS AFTER THEIR WEDDING

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans of Richmond, Ind., drowned in Fall creek last night when their automobile plunged through a guard rail as they drove to their wedding dinner. They had been married two hours before.

Fred Swishers, 28, of Campbellstown, O., and Miss Nora Higgs, 28, of Indianapolis, riding in the rear, escaped and swam to shore.

Mrs. Evans, who was 33 years old, is survived by a son, Wilbur Dormer, 16, of Indianapolis, and by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, and two brothers, all of Saltville, Va. Evans operated a garage at Richmond.

FIND NEW REASON FOR CONCEALING WEST PARK AUDIT

Sargent Group to Discuss It with Horner.

Inquiry of Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the citizens' committee on public expenditures, as to when his committee is going to make public its audit of the affairs of the west park board, brought the reply yesterday that the committee is still unwilling to release the report, characterized some time ago as "too hot to publish."

The latest reason given for the suppression of the audit, which was made at public expense by the accounting company of George W. Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, is that the citizens' committee wishes first to discuss it with Gov. Horner, who took office two weeks ago today.

Withheld at Election Time.

The citizens' committee obtained permission from the park board, of which W. R. James is president, to make the audit after its members had expressed concern over the disclosures made in a previous audit last summer. The Rossetter audit was completed shortly before the November election, but was withheld at that time because the committee feared that its announcement during the campaign might be regarded as a political attack upon the incumbent park commissioners, most of whom were active in the Republican party machine on the west side.

Interest in the audit increased after the election. Some general information as to its contents leaked out, but specific details were not forthcoming. The park board was one of the first governmental bodies in Cook county to default on its bond issues, and the audit is said to have disclosed that the defaults were the result of the spending of bond funds to build up a pay roll machine in the park district.

Two Weeks' Pay in Cash.

Employes of the district have had only two weeks' pay in cash in the last fifteen months, and have received only a portion of the remainder in tax warrants which are quoted at a lower price than those of any other major governmental body.

Questioned concerning the audit shortly after the election, Mr. Sargent remarked:

"All I will say about the west park system is that it is hopelessly insolvent."

Details of the audit continued to remain a secret. Meanwhile President James and other park commissioners were reported to be making strenuous efforts to "tone down" the report and to have some of the more stinging comments of the auditors deleted before it became public.

Although the state administration, to which they owe their offices has gone out of power, the old park commissioners still have possession of the offices and records of the park district, pending the appointment of their successors by Gov. Horner. Those appointments are expected soon.

GEORGE LEARNS ABOUT TAXES FROM SHOVELS

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

George Landlord, who, as recounted in these columns last week, became a landlord in name only when he gave up his struggle with declining rents and rising taxes and turned his apartment building over to an insurance company which held the mortgage, had occasion to go to the insurance company's offices.

When George lost possession of the building, he got a job as janitor of his former property, and his mission yesterday was to inform the apartment management officer of the insurance company of some necessary repairs. He found his new boss scanning a ledger sheet, his brow furrowed and his hair rumpled.

The Problem of 1931 Taxes.

"I am," said the official, "trying to squeeze enough money out of that building of yours to pay the 1931 taxes."

"Well, that's your worry now," chuckled George. "But if you had wanted to see some real, high class worrying you should have come around last year and watched me trying to get money for the 1930 bill. You're lucky. This last assessment cut your bill 25 per cent."

"Not by a long sight," said the official.

"But they cut the assessment 25 per cent, didn't they?" asked George.

"Yes," said the official. "They cut the assessed valuation 25 per cent, but they didn't cut the tax levies 25 per cent, because while the assessed valuation went down, the tax rate went up."

"You're going too fast for me," admitted George. "I guess I never did understand this tax machinery very well, anyway."

"There are a lot of folks in this town who don't," said the building manager. "It's a pretty complicated machine. But look here. Let's see if we can't simplify it a little for you."

Illustrates His Point.

He drew a scratch pad and began as follows:

"Let's put this tax collecting machinery on as simple a basis as possible. We'll make a shovel out of it. Now that shovel has just one purpose. That is to scoop up enough money once a year, in the form of taxes, to keep the various local governments running.

"Most of that revenue comes from real estate, so we'll continue our analogy and suppose that the property from which your tax money is to be scooped is a small patch of dirt—pay dirt. Now the first thing to do is to survey that patch of dirt.

"That is the work of the county assessor. Because Cook county is a very complicated patch of pay dirt, he has to have expert assistants to measure all the skyscrapers and bungalows, and your apartment building, and all of the railroad and personal property.

"When the assessor finishes his survey he has an assessment roll. The assessment roll is nothing more than the measure of the digging edge of our tax collection shovel. Our shovel, then, is just wide enough to scrape some pay dirt off every piece of taxable property in the county. It's particular length doesn't make any difference, as you will see presently.

"The principal requirement is that the edge of our shovel must be as straight and square as is humanly possible. Otherwise, you see, it will not take a fair bite of taxes off of every one's property. Back in 1928 the Supreme court tossed a Cook county tax levy into the discard. The edge of that tax shovel, through graft and tax fixing, had become so nicked and irregular that it was gouging some property owners and hardly touching others.

"Now the assessor has told us how wide to make our shovel. Then the heads of the various governments decide how much pay dirt they need for the year. Their estimates are called budgets, and they report to the county clerk how much pay dirt they will need.

Length of the Shovel.

"The county clerk already has been told by the assessor how wide the tax shovel is to be. He adds the pay dirt requests, which are the tax levies, and finds out how much he needs altogether. Then, knowing these two facts, he figures out how long he has to make our tax shovel to scoop up the required amount of pay dirt.

"That finishes our tax shovel. Actually, of course, there is a separate shovel for the state and each government, but since you get only one tax bill I've put them all in one shovel, to simplify the picture. In 1930 the assessment roll in the city of Chicago, or the width of the shovel, was 3,798 millions of dollars.

"The tax levies, or the total pay dirt demanded by the various governments from Chicago property owners, amounted to 252 millions of dollars. To get that pay dirt, the shovel had to be long enough to bite an average of $6.65 off every $100 in assessed valuations of property. That $6.65 was the average tax rate in the city—that is, the length of the tax shovel.

When Shovel Is Narrowed.

"Now, let's see what happens if we narrow our tax shovel. That was what happened in this last reassessment for 1931, when the assessment roll, or measure of our shovel edge, was cut about 16.1 per cent, reducing the roll to $3,285,000,000 in Chicago. The county clerk will soon get this new measurement from the assessor and will start to build a new shovel to scoop up the 1931 pay dirt. He already knows how much pay dirt the various governments want. Their requests, it has been estimated, amount to about 240 millions of dollars inside the Chicago city limits.

"That is a decrease of only about 5 per cent below their 1930 requests. But the edge of the shovel is 16 per cent narrower. What does the county clerk have to do?"

"It looks to me as if he'd have to get a longer shovel and take a deeper bite," hazarded George.

"That's just what he has to do," said the building manager. "He must lengthen his shovel, that is, increase the tax rate. The assessments are down 16 per cent. The tax levies are down only about 5 per cent. Therefore the tax rates have to be about 10 per cent higher than they were for 1930, to make our shovel long enough. The average tax rate in Chicago will be about $7.33, instead fo $6.65, per $100 assessed valuation."

Assessment Cut Doesn't Help.

"From what you tell me, then, cutting the assessments didn't help a bit on our tax bills," said George Landlord.

"Not a bit," said the building manager. "When you cut assessments without cutting tax levies, you're only tinkering with the shape of your shovel. You could cut your tax shovel to a tenth its former width and if you don't reduce tax levies, that just means that the shovel will have to dig ten times as deep as it did before."

"Then why worry about assessments?" asked George.

"You needn't," he was told, "except to see that your assessment is kept on the same general level with that of every one else—in short, that the edge of your tax shovel is kept straight. If you want to cut your taxes, make the governments take less pay dirt—lower their tax levies."

"And then the taxes on my old building are not going to be 15 per cent lower, but only 5 per cent lower this year?" asked George.

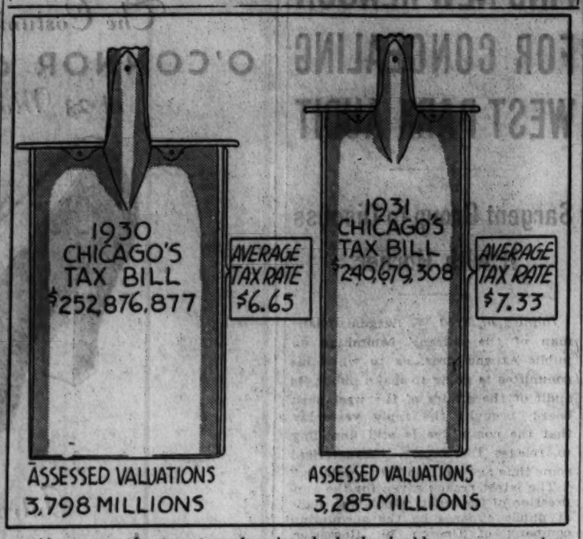
"That's not quite true," said the manager. "I wanted to keep this picture I am drawing for you as simple as possible, so I lumped the personal property in with the real estate. As a matter of fact, while the 1931 assessment roll dropped only about 15 per cent, the assessments on real estate were, as you say, cut nearer 25 per cent. The difference was made up by increased assessments on personal property.

"The result of this is that less of the edge of your tax shovel bears on real estate than formerly, and more upon personal property. According to the best estimates available, real estate taxes, while they will not drop 25 per cent, will be reduced about 15 per cent."

"There's just one thing more I'd like to know," said George Landlord. "You've shown me that the shape of the tax shovel doesn't make any difference. Suppose the pay dirt isn't deep enough for the shovel to bite down and get its full load for the tax spenders—what happens?"

"That seems to be what's the trouble with us here in Chicago today," said the manager. "The governments are going to have to get along on less pay dirt. If they don't, we might as well throw away the shovel."

Two Tax Shovels of Chicago



Above are the two tax shovels which the building manager drew to show George Landlord how the tax machinery works. The reduced assessment roll narrowed the 1931 shovel, but because tax levies weren't reduced proportionately the shovel had to be made longer, that is, the tax rate had to be increased, to bring in the taxes to finance local governments. The estimate of Chicago's 1931 tax bill is that of the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency.

Radio Violinist Seized with Wife of Another

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Daniel Lubowski, 26 years old, violinist, who plays with a Chicago radio ensemble under the name of Daniel Lube, and Mrs. La Rue Engelhardt, 38 years old, wife of another radio violinist, were arrested today in a room in the Wisconsin hotel. Mrs. Engelhardt's husband, Charles, led detectives to the hotel room. Engelhardt told the police he lived at 5825 Winthrop avenue, Chicago. Mrs. Engelhardt asserted she meant to marry Lubowski when she got a divorce. She is the mother of a 10 year old boy. Lubowski lives in the New Lawrence hotel, Chicago.

TRIBUNE TO ASSIST PUBLIC IN MAKING OUT INCOME RETURNS

For the fourteenth consecutive year the Public Service office of THE TRIBUNE, at 1 South Dearborn street, is prepared to assist the public in making out income tax returns. A. A. Schultz, deputy collector of internal revenue, has been assigned to the office, and has a corps of assistants to help him. More deputy collectors will be assigned to the office as applications for aid increase.

An increase in the number of persons seeking aid is expected this year because of the change in the tax law lowering exemptions in all classes. Chicagoans are urged to make out their returns early and avoid the rush near the deadline on March 15. In past years the office has served as many as 15,000 persons during the filing period.

In addition to tax help the office gives information on train and automobile travel and kindred subjects. Last year more than 1,000,000 requests for assistance were handled.

10 Cent Meals Are Served at University of Kansas

Lawrence, Kas., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Ten cent meals now are offered for the University of Kansas students who can't pay more. Chancellor E. H. Lindley explained today the object was to keep in school the bright young men and women who otherwise would be forced to drop out because of financial difficulties. Mrs. Ethel Evans, director of the university cafeteria, plans the menus.

Son Shot to Death as He Runs to Help Father

Lester Schiller, 23 years old, 5033 St. Lawrence avenue, was shot and fatally wounded last night in front of his home by an unidentified Negro who escaped. Schiller's father, Harry, who owns the building in which they live, found the Negro in the hallway and ordered him out. A quarrel ensued and the elder Schiller drew a revolver. The Negro disarmed him and as Lester ran from the building to aid his father he was shot through the body. He died shortly afterward in the Chicago General hospital.

LOWER THAN AUCTION PRICES

to Liquidate Watson & Boaler Collections of Fine Furniture and Decorations

TWICE recently Watson & Boaler have announced important reductions in the prices of their unusual stocks of fine old pieces and reproductions.

Now, inaugurating a reorganization program, the third reduction goes into effect today of another 50% average on the former low markings.

The prices are actually below figures which an auction sale would ordinarily bring. The selections, however, in completeness and uniform excellence cannot be compared with auction stocks.

This is an opportunity, without precedent in our long experience, to obtain extraordinary values in importations, antiques, and the better sort of reproductions.

It is an opportunity of limited duration as the reductions apply only to present stocks which will not be replenished for this sale. They are to be liquidated as the first step in a complete reorganization of Watson & Boaler, Inc., which firm will continue at the present address.

We urge on everyone interested in furniture and decorations the importance of visiting this sale and suggest the wisdom of coming early while stocks offer the widest selection.

TRANSIT STRIKE THREATENS TO TIE UP LONDON

13,000 Busmen Idle; Police Guard Garages.

BY EUGENE SPECK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 22.—More than 10,000 bus strikers, who have disregarded union orders and tied up about three-fourths of London's chief transportation system, tonight threatened to extend their rebellious influence into other means of travel and paralyze the city.

Heavy details of police were stationed at the London General Omnibus company garages as the number of strikers swelled to at least 13,000 out of a total of about 20,000 drivers and conductors.

More than half the company's buses—with their engines warmed up in the event of a resumption of work—are standing in garages. But few signs are visible that the independent strike in contravention of all union orders will be called off soon.

Plead with Men to Return.

The executive committee of the Transport and General Workers' union, acting in cooperation with its bus committee, tonight issued a new appeal to its men pleading with them to return to work. The manifesto was published after a conference this afternoon with Lord Ashfield, London transit magnate, who has assumed personal charge of the dispute.

Several street car terminals were closed tonight as a result of sympathetic action. The most important terminal was Hanwell, where the tram and bus workers have an agreement with each other to walk out if the other does in a labor dispute. Other tram lines owned by the omnibus company are also involved and it is feared lines to the London county council street car system, which serves wide areas of London.

Ask Aid of Others.

Appeals have been addressed on behalf of the strikers to all workers of London's subway and tram lines asking them to assist the busmen's protest against minor increases in speed which the company ordered so as to avoid wage cuts.

In outlying districts, where most of the bus terminals are located, crowds of busmen lounged today listening to reports from London's deserted streets. Most garages were heavily picketed. The opinion of most of the strikers is the the objectionable speed increase must be removed.

Bomb Damages Flat Building Porch

Police Hunt Motive

The West North avenue police yesterday sought a motive for the bombing earlier in the day of a two story flat building at 2637 West Superior street. The bomb, which caused $500 worth of damage, was exploded beneath the rear porch. The families of Louis Cicero, who lives on the first floor, and Charles Spioveri, on the second floor, were routed from their beds by the blast.

Joseph A. Porcaro of 2531 West Superior street, Republican committeeman of the 28th ward, told the police he moved out of the house several years ago, and he said the bomb could not have been meant for him. In 1928 his present home was the target of a bomb after the election of that year.

4 HOUR WEATHER MAP SERVICE TO AID U. S. FLYERS

Eliminates Uncertainty Along Airways.

BY HUGH SEXTON.

A new weather information service has been placed in operation at Chicago airport for the use of both the air lines and private flyers, which eliminates much of the uncertainty as to weather conditions along the airways. The service consists of weather maps, covering the east and middle west, which are prepared at four hour intervals, day and night.

The weather maps are drawn at Cleveland, for the eastern section, and at Kansas City, for the central section, and transmitted from those points over the teletypewriter circuits of the department of commerce. They show barometic pressures and areas of high and low pressure. In addition the maps give the weather conditions at points from which reports are collected, including the ceiling, general conditions, visibility, temperature, wind direction, and velocity.

A Picture of Conditions.

The value of the maps, according to operations managers of the air lines, is that they provide complete pictures of weather conditions at frequent intervals, disclosing the exact conditions at certain points on the airways, and showing the movement of high and low pressure areas which will affect weather along the airways.

The maps are supplemented by the broadcasting of information every hour over the department of commerce radio stations as to exact conditions along the airways and at airports. Thus, a pilot studies the latest weather maps before taking off, and while in the air receives the later information on the radiophone.

Map Transmission Described.

The system of transmitting the weather maps every four hours over the teletypewriter was described by H. M. Dudley, in charge of the Chicago office. The blank map is inserted in the receiving typewriter and symbols are written in at the appropriate points by the typewriter keys. The map is "drawn" in this manner, line by line, to the bottom of the page. At each receiving station the map is reproduced.

When the whole map is received, Dudley takes it from the machine and draws in the isobars, or lines connecting points of equal barometric pressure, to complete the map. About 100 copies made from the original by a hectograph process are distributed to pilots.

'Song of the Flame' Actor Wounded in Castle Scene

The storming of a castle in the operetta, "The Song of the Flame," had a realistic touch added yesterday at the rehearsal of the show at the Civic Opera house. While shots were being fired, William Dalton, 27 years old, 4039 Warwick avenue, who takes the part of a castle guard, fell wounded to the floor. He was taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital where it was found he had been struck in the right thigh by wadding from a blank cartridge. He was also treated for a powder burn.

ILLINOIS TRADE GROUP OPPOSES 6 HOUR DAY LAW

Attack Black Bill as a Bar to Employment.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday forwarded a protest to Washington against the Black bill providing for a six hour day and a five day week, now pending before the senate judiciary committee. The measure, through its "inelasticity and interference with the orderly and natural operations of industry" would contribute to, rather than alleviate, the present unemployment distress, in the opinion of the manufacturers.

The letter, signed by Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, president of the association, attacked the bill as discriminatory, affecting the working time in factories and mines, but not in agriculture, merchandising and transportation.

Some of the specific objections called to the attention of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, chairman of the judiciary committee, are:

"It would curtail permanently opportunities for employment and consequently the earning power of the people of this country, destroying their liberty to advance themselves by their own efforts and their own earnings.

"If effective, the proposal would not make more work but would merely divide available work opportunities for shorter periods of time and with less return to employes.

"The practice of work sharing is most widely in effect in manufacturing industries, which are included in the measure, and least in effect in occupations omitted.

"It would substitute the danger of under-employment for unemployment.

"Manufacturers, miners and their employes would be compelled to operate under conditions which congress has no legal authority to impose with regard to business within the boundaries of a state as well as interstate commerce."

The letter stated that the association for three years had done its utmost to spread available work among employes by shortening the working time, by working alternate shifts and by staggering periods of employment, but objected to legislative restrictions that would not permit of such changes as competition, seasonal and trade conditions might require.

SAVING PUPILS' EGO IS AIM OF SCHOOL FRILLS

Two Principals Explain What They're Doing.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

The "ego" of the school child is not neglected under the new "progressive" education being incorporated into the Chicago public schools. The "ego" and the "inferiority complex" often are alluded to by Chicago educators.

Such serious attention is devoted to the ego, in fact, that many courses requiring elaborate equipment for classrooms are now compulsory in the junior high schools. The more equipment the more ego, apparently is the rule of "progressive" education.

Progressive Idea Explained.

Miss Sophie A. Thielgaard, principal of the Foreman Junior High school, who boasts that her school "is full of so-called fads and frills," refers to a passage which she wrote in a pamphlet issued by the board of education on junior high schools to explain her idea of progressive education.

"The matter for progressive procedure is comprised in sections of subject matter to be assimilated," Miss Thielgaard wrote. "The matter for progressive procedure is comprised in skills, attitudes, and appreciations to be attained. . . . The basic unit of material in traditional procedure is a body of knowledge. The basic unit of material in progressive procedure is a center of interest which contributes to the immediate life experience of the pupil."

View of Another Principal.

Principal S. R. Meck of the Herzl Junior High school, 3711 Douglas boulevard, who describes himself as 'comparatively old fashioned, not a simon pure progressive," said that the compulsory courses in shops and the household arts save the egos of many a boy and girl.

"We used to flunk between 30 and 40 per cent of the pupils in the first year of senior high school," he said. "Now we feel that a child who flunks gets an inferiority complex. So we flunk almost no one."

To illustrate his old fashioned ways, Mr. Meck pointed out that the boys and girls going from one class to another through the corridors of the Herzl school are required to walk in twos. They may talk, and they do, in piercing accents, but they must walk in twos, said Principal Meck.

Freedom at Foreman High.

"We want them to feel free," explained Miss Thielgaard.

Just as the junior high school boys are required to take 10 weeks of work in a woodshop, 10 in an electricity shop, 10 in a sheet metal shop, and 10 in a printing shop, so all girls are required to take 40 weeks of home economics. They spend 10 weeks in child care, and 10 weeks each in household management, cooking and sewing.

Two rooms of the Foreman school are equipped with individual sinks, gas stoves, work tables and storage cupboards for 32 girl pupils, as well as huge gas ranges and electric refrigerators. Two sewing rooms are outfitted with electric irons, ironing boards, fitting tables, storage cupboards and sewing machines. When this observer visited the school none of the rooms held large classes.

Dining Room Is Provided.

A private dining room in the school is described in "The Foreman Pathfinder," a pupil manual, as follows: "This room is for the use of girls who are receiving training in serving meals or acting as hostesses. The room is furnished with a mahogany buffet, dining table, Windsor chairs, rockers, plants and delicate hand block printed draperies which can be operated in the latest fashion by means of a pull cord. A pewter tea service and special green dishes complete the equipment."

In one of two music rooms, built with seats rising in tiers, a class of only 15 pupils was singing. A "band room" was almost empty. A mechanical drawing room was unoccupied. Another music room was visited which was filled.

"Would you like me to play some records of Indian music today, or do you want to hear something else?" the instructor asked the pupils as the class period began.

Four Art Rooms Described.

The four art rooms in the school are described in last month's issue of "The Foreman Flash," a monthly school paper. The description reads in part:

"Notice those desks, they can be raised or tipped to any angle. The pockets at the side, and under the desk tops, are used for equipment.

"Just step up here and examine the cupboards on the rear and side walls, for the contain movable shelves. . . . Each room has a large white sink, which is used for water color and craft work.

"Yes, Foremanites, we are lucky to have such nice rooms to work in and teachers such as Miss Tebbetts, Mrs. Tucker, and Mr. Yochim. Under their expert instruction we are taught drawing, painting, clay modeling and how to make beautiful block prints."

Another specialty of Foreman Junior High school is its "social hour," which is described in "The Foreman Pathfinder" as "an hour of fun and dancing which takes place after school at intervals during the semester. The hour is spent in learning the correct manners of ballroom dancing." The dances taught are the waltz, two step, one step and fox trot.

A long list of instructions headed "The Dance" is included in the pupil manual. In the behavior rules laid down, a boy is told that he may send flowers to the girl he is taking to the dance "if at that time flowers are being worn and if he can afford to send them." He is told he must see that the girl's dances are taken and that he must stand four inches from her when he dances with her.

More of the Dancing Rules.

Other rules for the dance, of which there are 26, include:

"The boy apologizes when he and his partner bump against any one in dancing. He says merely, 'I am sorry.'

"A boy must never leave a girl standing alone in the middle of the floor. . . .

"When the music ends the boy always thanks the girl for the dance. He may say, 'Thank you for the dance.' The girl answers, 'I am glad you liked it' or 'I enjoyed it, too.' These polite forms simply may not be omitted.

"The only courteous and proper way to leave a girl is to bow and say, 'Excuse me. I have the next dance.'

"To go out on the street and sit in a parked car or to take a walk or a ride is the height of bad manners."

Choristers Sing

The diamond jubilee of the Paulist Fathers was celebrated yesterday in St. Mary's church, 9th street and Wabash avenue, with solemn jubilee mass sung by the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of Notre Dame university. The Rev. Daniel A. Lord preached the sermon and the Paulist choristers sang. By special invitation Bishop B. J. Sheil was present.

Father Walter E. Hopper, who is 74 years old but active on the parish staff at St. Mary's, assisted in the jubilee celebration. The Paulist order was founded by the Rev. Isaac T. Hecker in New York, and St. Mary's, their only parish in Chicago, was intrusted to their care in 1903.

FRANCE PLANS SHIP TO REPLACE BURNED STEAMER

LA CIOTAT, France, Jan. 22.—(AP)—France intends to replace the luxury steamship Atlantique in the South American service with a unit "capable of maintaining worthily the traditions of reciprocity on which our valued friendships on the South American continent are nurtured," Leon Meyer, minister of merchant marine, said in a speech read by his secretary here today.

The occasion was the launching of the new Messageries Maritimes liner Paul Doumer, destined for the far eastern trade. M. Meyer could not be present because of illness.

The Atlantique burned recently in the English channel.

An inquest will be held today into the death of Fred Schuster, 60 years old, 10236 Perry avenue, an unemployed painter, whose body was taken from the lake at 55th street.

POLICE HUNTING 2 BANDITS WHO ROBBED BRIDE

Police yesterday were looking for two bandits who on Saturday night beat Mrs. Inez Howe, 35 years old, a bride of three months, in her apartment at 4550 North Racine avenue.

The gunmen followed her to her apartment. When she screamed, one of the men struck her with his fist, knocking her down. The men then tied Mrs. Howe with an electric light cord and gagged her with a towel.

Searching the apartment, the robbers found $5 in Mrs. Howe's purse. They threatened to beat her because she did not have more money, but finally left. Mrs. Howe remained a prisoner for three hours, being released finally when her hubsand, Louis, a stationary engineer, returned home.

Fishing Boat and Six Men Lost in Lower California

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Officials of the Gulf Fisheries announced here today that one of their fishing boats, with six men aboard, was lost in a sudden storm off Rocky Point, Lower California, Mexico, this morning. Capt. Andres Ruiz and the five Yaqui Indians of his crew were the men lost. The boat made two trips daily to bring in deep sea fish for Phoenix and other Arizona markets.

WARNS SCHOOLS MUST FIND NEW REVENUE SOURCE

Findings in U. S. Report Made Public.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Because of a breakdown in the traditional methods of supplying funds for education, more than a third of the school children in the United States are being deprived of essential instruction, it was announced today.

Dr. Paul R. Mort, active head of the national survey of school finance, who gave the figures underlying the estimate, based his statements on a two year study carried out by the survey group under federal auspices. At the same time he made public proofs of the report prepared by the widely known educators, public officials, and private citizens who cooperated in the survey.

Survey Authorized by Congress.

This report linked the problems of education and taxation, asserting that the country must enter upon a new era of school finance in which educational costs will be borne by the state as a whole, rather than by individual communities. The report further declares that the burden of school costs must be shifted from the general property tax, which now supplies a large part of state school funds, to other imposts.

The survey, authorized by congress in 1931, was conducted in part with federal funds, under the general direction of Dr. William John Cooper, United States commissioner of education. When the present economy program of the national government resulted in the holding up of further appropriations funds to complete the work were furnished by the general education board of New York City. The report is being published under the auspices of teachers' college, Columbia university, of which Dr. Mort is a member of the faculty.

Urge New Source of Revenue.

In summary, their findings concerning the relation of taxation and state aid to schools were that the great dependence placed on the general property tax in many states has created a condition in which localities can no longer depend upon further property taxes to provide funds for education above the amounts granted them by the state.

Because of this fact the report urged that the states should in the future raise educational funds from other taxes.

Dr. Mort said that about 9,500,000 are receiving inadequate instruction and asserted that the economic situation with respect to school funds is such that the standards for millions of other children are endangered.

PAY CUT PLANS UP TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES TODAY

Board Will Hold Secret Salary Conference.

The board of education will hold another secret session this afternoon to debate salary cuts for teachers and other school employés. A majority of the trustees have said they would vote to make the cuts in order to balance the 1933 school budget in which the appropriations now exceed the estimated resources by $3,000,000.

School Auditor Harry Brackett has been instructed to produce at the meeting figures on the savings that would be effected under two pay-cut plans.

Mr. Brackett and his assistant, Roscoe L. Douglas, toiled all day yesterday and will continue work this morning on new salary schedules for all classes of employés in the school system.

One of the plans, advanced by Trustee Joseph P. Savage, provides for a minimum cut of 10 per cent in the pay of each employé above an exemption of $1,000.

The other economy plan has been suggested by Trustee Robert F. Carr. Mr. Carr—and some of his associates are of the same mind—would trim $500 from the $1,500 salary which a new elementary teacher receives upon entering the school system. Since the system absorbs about 600 new teachers a year, the 1933 saving from this plan has been estimated at nearly $300,000.

Cermak Control Is Near.

After the budget is adopted, which may be this week, Mayor Cermak will gain control of the school board. At present seven of the eleven trustees are appointees of a former Republican administration. President Lewis E. Myers, one of the holdover trustees, however, has sent in his resignation, effective when the budget is adopted.

Trustee Carter Blatchford, another holdover, who has not attended a board meeting since last spring, has indicated that he will also retire.

"I have told mutual friends to go to the mayor and tell him he can have my job if he wants it," said Mr. Blatchford. "My health won't permit attention to both the school board duties and my business."

The appointment of two new trustees to fill the places of Myers and Blatchford will give the mayor seven board members. One of the seven, William D. McJunkin, was appointed by the former Republican mayor, but several months ago he threw in his lot with the Democratic trustees.

Three More Retire in May.

In May the mayor will have three more appointments to make. At that time the terms of Trustees James A. Hemingway, H. Wallace Caldwell and John A. English expire.

It is said that Mr. Blatchford has remained on the board in case his Republican vote should be needed in a party fight. The last meeting he attended was on May 25, 1932, when he voted to reelect Mr. Myers president of the board. Myers got six votes and Trustee Carr, a Cermak appointee, received four.

The Joint Committee on Public School Affairs, an organization representing 31 societies interested in the school system, yesterday sent Mayor Cermak a letter suggesting a number of persons for nomination to the school board seats that will be vacated.

Those suggested were James Mullenbach, a former school trustee and chairman of the joint committee; Mrs. Samuel T. Lawton, vice chairman; Graham Aldis, Dr. Charles S. Bacon, Henry P. Chandler, Joshua D'Esposito, Earl B. Dickerson, Mrs. Elizabeth Lndsay Davis, Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, John A. Lapp, Dr. Louis L. Mann, Philip L. Seman, Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, and Bernard E. Sunny.

SEE 36TH STATE ACTING TODAY ON LAME DUCK CURB

Massachusetts, Missouri May Complete List.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The death knell probably will sound tomorrow for "lame duck" sessions of congress, with Massachusetts versus Missouri versus Nevada the lineup for the final toll.

Thirty-five legislatures have ratified the twentieth amendment to the constitution in less than a year, and any one of the three states may complete the ratification before Monday is many hours old.

In the background loom Utah, Wisconsin, and Georgia as the possible final actors on the amendment which Virginia started on its way to approval last year, two days after congress had submitted it to the states.

Has Edge in Time.

The Missouri senate has approved the amendment and the house is slated to vote by noon tomorrow. The same status pertains in Massachusetts, with the Bay state holding an hour's edge in time. The Nevada legislature is to take up the amendment the first thing tomorrow, with immediate action indicated, but it is three hours behind eastern standard time.

The Wisconsin assembly has approved the amendment and an early senate affirmation is anticipated, but the legislature does not meet until Tuesday.

Second reading of the amendment is scheduled for Monday afternoon in the Utah assembly, but observers there see a chance of suspension of the rules to permit immediate passage, making Utah the 36th state.

Georgia is Candidate.

Georgia is also among the states where early ratification is possible, but incomplete action by both house and senate is an impediment to victory.

Immediately upon ratification by the 36th state, the constitution will be amended so that the congress elected in November will convene Jan. 3, and the President and Vice President will take their oaths Jan. 20. Some time after the final action the secretary of state will proclaim its ratification.

Dr. Corvin F. Stine, 2215 Greenleaf avenue, a dentist, reported to the Rogers Park police last night that he has an unidentified nominee for Chicago's meanest man. Several days ago "Wildee," a 5 month old police pup belonging to Dr. Stine's children wandered away from home and the family inserted a lost ad in THE TRIBUNE. On Friday, Dr. Stine said, a man telephoned, asked for a description of the lost dog, and admitted that he had the animal, but refused to return Wildee or to give his own name.

CHINA MASSING 250,000 TROOPS AROUND JEHOL

Prepares to Halt Drive of Japanese.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Reports from farflung areas of China indicate that the nation is assembling a vast but loosely knit war machine of 250,000 troops in Jehol and North Chihli provinces, where the Chinese and Japanese are rubbing elbows following upon the occupation early in the month by the Japanese of Shanhaikwan. Many believe that war impends, but the freezing winds and snow now sweeping north Asia may delay a break.

What the future will bring forth remains a mystery, but the predominant opinion is that the Japanese are planning to enter Jehol soon, but not the Chinwangtao, Tientsin and Peiping areas. A campaign there would rouse international complications.

From as far away as Kalgan (Changkiakow) on the Mongolian frontier, China's northern legions numbering 50,000 were reported moving eastward into Jehol province, while additional thousands were taking up positions south of the Great Wall along the Tientsin-Shanhaikwan railway.

Placement of Forces.

It was stated in reputedly informed quarters that the disposition of the Chinese forces is: In eastern Jehol, 36,000 troops of Chang Yu-lin, Jehol governor, and in central and western Jehol 50,000 from Kalgan.

South of the great wall 10,000 troops face Shanhaikwan from the southeast, while further toward Tiensin along the railway, 28,000 are stationed between Chinwangtao and Changli. 50,000 are on duty between Changli and Lwanchow, while 30,000 are encamped between Tientsin and the Lwan river.

An additional 30,000 are reported to be in the vicinity of Peiping, all supposedly under the orders of Chiang Hsueh-liang, war lord, whom the Japanese admittedly seek to eliminate from north China affairs. These forces were reported to consist primarily of poorly equipped infantry, with a small number of machine gunners, artillery and cavalry in support.

Chinese Leaders Confer.

NANKING, Jan. 23.—[Monday.]—(AP)—On the heels of Tokio advices telling of the annual contingent of Japanese military conscripts now being called up, Chinese leaders are conferring here and there is evidence of patriotic fervor increasing in great measure throughout China.

The advices say that the Japanese conscripts will be sent to Manchuria immediately instead of receiving recruit training in Japan, and that Japanese soldiers in Manchuria whose time has expired would be retained under the colors temporarily. Chinese assert this will result in a 50 per cent increase of Japanese forces in Manchuria, consequently an "increased invasion of China."

Urges Big Mobilization.

Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, commander of Chinese troops in North China, and Tuan Chi-jui, premier a decade ago and leader of the Tientsin Anfu party, each arrived here by airplane this morning. Chang conferred with Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, and it is said he urged mobilization of all forces of the nation to support the defense of Jehol or an advance on the Tientsin-Peiping area within the month. Tuan Chi-jui, whose party has been suspected of pro-Japanese sympathies, assured Marshal Chang Kai-shek of his loyalty.

A national patriotic movement is growing to raise funds to buy combat planes. In Shanghai a plea has been made to give up a meal on Jan. 28, the anniversary of the bombardment of

Caustic comment in Nanking characterized the reaction of the Nationalist government to the speech before the Japanese diet Saturday of Foreign Minister Uchida in which he warned China against invading the province of Jehol. Vernacular newspapers said editorially, "The only point of interest in the speech reveals that the Japanese foreign office now joins hands with the Japanese war office in agitating Japanese invasion of Jehol."

CHINA IS PEACE MENACE, AVERS JAP COMMANDER

Issues Warning That War Acts Must Stop.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TIENTSIN, China, Jan. 22.—Japan wants peace and friendship with China. Japan does not want the Manchurian crisis to extend to China proper. Japan does not want war with China. Japan wants friendly relations with the other powers interested in China.

So states Lieut. Gen. Kotaro Nakamura, commander of the Japanese forces in North China, in an interview today. But he also declared:

"If Chinese troops continue their mobilization and other warlike activities, and the league of nations continues to support China against Japan, there will continue to be disturbances of the peace and order of the far east."

Staff Officers Nod Assent.

The interview took place in Japanese military headquarters in the Japanese concession of Tientsin. The table at which THE TRIBUNE correspondent was seated was surrounded by other Japanese staff officers, who nodded assent to Nakamura's statements.

With reference to present developments in the league Gen. Nakamura said:

"If the league clearly understood Japan's position and the situation in the far east there would be no war, because Japan's present and past actions are concerned only with the creation of peace and order and the stabilization of far eastern politics; but in event the league fails to pay heed to the statements of Yosuke Matsuoka [Japanese delegate at Geneva] conditions in the orient are likely to be otherwise than peaceful."

Regarding the local situation in the Tientsin-Peiping area, Gen. Nakamura claimed the anti-Japanese boycott is serious. Warehouses are filled with Japanese good which cannot be delivered due to the activities of so-called Chinese patriotic bodies, he declared. He said the anti-Japanese feeling and the boycott are strongest in the places where Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's troops are quartered.

There will be no trouble, however, unless it is started by the Chinese, he asserted, adding that about 5,000 Japanese civilians, as well as 500 Koreans here, must be protected. In the event of troube it would require more than three days to obtain reënforcements from Japan proper and 24 hours to obtain help from Dairen, he stated.

Refers to Anfu Clique.

Gen. Nakamura said China's recent resumption of relations with soviet Russia is making the situation worse, since it is encouraging communistic elements. The effect of the resumption of relations already is evidenced by the arrival of cargoes of soviet goods in the Tientsin market, he pointed out.

The Japanese commander devoted considerable attention to Chinese politics in North China. He said many leaders of political groups here, particularly the Anfu clique, are favorable to Japan, but are afraid to express themselves. He refused to comment on reports in the Chinese press that the Japanese are trying to restore the Anfu group to legalize a Chinese-Japanese military alliance and to obtain payment on loans, now defaulted, amounting to more than 300,000,000 Chinese dollars [about $100,000,000], which the Anfu clique, then ruling, negotiated during the world war.

Gen. Nakamura disclaimed knowledge of developments in Jehol province and said his only interest is to preserve the terms of the Boxer protocol which gives Japan and other powers the right to station troops in North China to keep the railway open from Peiping to the sea.

He claimed the Shanhaikwan incident had no connection with Jehol, that Jehol is a definite part of Manchukuo and that many elements in Jehol desire to join Manchukuo. The general concluded:

"We hope that railway communication will be undisturbed. If Chinese troops are withdrawn to their original stations, the present crisis will be easily liquidated. However, I cannot say whether Shankaikwan will be returned to China or to Manchukuo. China is making a serious mistake to think she can wear Japan out by drawing Japan into the Chinese morass."

Japs Eye League Action.

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—[Monday.]—(AP)—Whether Japan will withdraw from the league of nations will depend on the "degree of wickedness" with which she will be blamed in a report the assembly is expected to render in accordance with paragraph four, article 15, of the league covenant, a foreign office spokesman said today.

(The league's committee of nineteen decided Saturday that efforts to find a basis for conciliatory settlement of the Sino-Japanese conflict had virtually ended and that it would begin immediately preparing a report with recommendations for dealing with the controversy.)

Japan considers that efforts for arbitration have ended and that there will be no attempt to prevent the committee from making a report nor to subject them to any influence. This means that Japan's participation in the league's 14 months long search for a solution to the Manchurian problem has virtually ceased.

Government officials here, however, are confident that the league will not attempt to apply article 16, involving sanctions, despite China's expected demand that this be done. The foreign office spokesman asserted that a test of the league's attitude will come when the Japanese army proceeds into Jehol, the province between China proper and Manchuria.

You smoke a Pipe—

© 1933, LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

All races of people since the beginning of time, so far as we have been able to read, have had some kind of a pipe and have smoked something—whether they called it tobacco or what-not.

AND since smoking a pipe is so different from smoking a cigar or a cigarette, we made a most painstaking, scientific study in an effort to make, if we could, a tobacco which was suited to pipes.

We found out, first, that there was a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called "White Burley", and that there was a certain kind of this tobacco which was between the tobacco used for cigarettes and the tobacco used for chewing tobacco. It is this tobacco which is best for pipes.

Having got the right tobacco, we then began to study the method of making it.

We found out that Mr. J. N. Wellman, way back many years ago, in a small factory, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular. But he was not in a position to advertise it, and after he passed away there was nothing more heard about it.

We acquired this Wellman Method of making pipe tobacco—and that is what we use in making GRANGER ROUGH CUT.

The next thing was to cut the tobacco. We knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. It kept your pipe hot. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

Then we remembered that some folks back yonder used to "whittle" their tobacco. So we made GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco—"Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts a lot longer. And also, you'll find it never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. It was a question of how to do it for the price.

So we put GRANGER in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke a package. We gave smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10c.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it—we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

AMERICAN GIRLS SEIZED; EXPELLED FROM TURKESTAN

In this article the author, who, with Mary L. De Give, another American girl, made an unescorted fourteen weeks' tour of Russia last fall, tells how the hitherto tolerant attitude of the soviet authorities toward them began to change into one of hostility.

BY ALVA CHRISTENSEN.

[Copyright 1933 By The Chicago Tribune.]

Although we had been given an official assurance that the hotel in Tashkent would receive us, we found that this was little more than a pleasant fiction. When we visited the manager he told us that he was anxious to accommodate us, but that it was impossible.

"I am very sorry," he said, "but three-fourths of the rooms are under repair now. The best I can do is to put two beds in my office here. You may have them for two nights only."

The Trick of Getting Food.

Mary L. and I had come to the conclusion that three-fourths of all Russia was under repair whenever any one wanted to use anything. But we made the best of the situation and ate ther thankfully than otherwise accepted the office as a bedroom.

Tashkent was an inhospitable town. There were no open restaurants and we could not get tickets to use in closed ones. But we had learned a trick or two in our weeks of wandering in the land of the soviets, and we ate.

We learned where the Red army kitchen was and marched into it, loudly demanding food. The chef was astonished and asked us volubly to leave. Pretending to misunderstand, we marched on into the dining room and sat down. It was the officers' mess and, once introduced, we were allowed to remain. The food was good. The army at least in Russia eats well.

Find City Filthy.

The city was unpleasant as well as lacking in hospitality. The streets lay inches deep in dust until it rained, and then they lay deep in mud. We speedily became disgusted with the place, and with the treatment accorded us. Perhaps this was partly due to the fact that, under the protection of the all powerful G. P. U., we had been helped a great deal before.

However, the personal habits of the inhabitants added to our dislike. We went, the one clear, dry day we spent in Tashkent, into the park. Sewers must have been scarce. The grassy plots under the trees took their place and the park was dirtier than the hotel.

On the third morning in Tashkent, when we applied for our tickets to Tiflis, we were told we would have them that afternoon. As there was nothing to do and nothing worth seeing we went back to the hotel to vent all our disgust and anger in our notes on Tashkent.

Accused of Serious Crime.

At 3 o'clock the manager of the hotel informed us that we would have to go to the foreign office of the Tashkent soviet. We splashed through the mud to this office, where we were told we had committed a serious crime.

The dirgotor asked for a detailed report of where we had been and how we had been able to get as far as Tashkent. We told him that the Georgian Sovnarcom and the Tiflis Intourist had both assured us that travel to Turkestan was open.

He asserted we could not get tickets to Tiflis, and unless we went to Moscow we would be expelled from the country at once. We explained to him that all our baggage and practically all of our money was in Tiflis, that we were very anxious to go back there so we could get to Moscow for the Nov. 7 celebrations. He was obdurate. It made no difference to him that we were clothed in light summer clothing and that it was winter in Moscow.

After receiving our passports we left, telling him we would think it over. When we arrived at the hotel, however, our Moscow tickets were waiting for us. We were virtually under arrest. However, it didn't upset us greatly, as it would give us time to find a hotel room in Moscow before the big rush for the celebrations.

We finished amusing ourselves that evening by writing more fiery notes than before about Tashkent. These notes we shoved into our suitcase just before leaving the hotel at midnight.

That time we had to pay 25 rubles to get to the station. When we arrived there we found that the train was hours late, and no one knew when it would be in, so we begged to be allowed to sit in the buffet with our baggage. As we were foreigners we were given that privilege.

Suitcase Is Missing.

About 3 a. m. the buffet was to be cleaned, so all other customers were forced to leave. We were allowed to remain with our baggage, but when we went to move it to a far-away corner our black suitcase was not there, nor was it in the buffet at all.

Our first impulse was that the G. P. U. had taken it, since they had had no opportunity to examine our luggage in the hotel room, as is their custom. Since we had no business being in that part of the country they may have felt that we were carrying contraband goods with us. We may be wrong, but it was the opinion of all we consulted, including Russians, that the G. P. U. took the suitcase.

While Mary L. guarded the rest of the luggage, I reported the loss to the station G. P. U., who merely laughed. That verified our opinion. We had in that suitcase, beside our condemning notes, all our films of Turkestan, our letter from Sovnarcom about the automobile, a camera, our American revolver, all our letters of identification and some insect poison.

48 Hours Without Food.

At 9 a. m. we began our four nights and four days trip to Moscow, passing through the rest of Russian Asia and the Kara Kum desert without food. For forty-eight hours we starved, but were finally able to buy half-done chicken from the peasants at the stations.

We arrived in Moscow on the morning of Oct. 30 with only summer coats on and nearly frozen. We tramped from hotel to hotel a whole day trying to find a room, but without success. Friends, a newspaper correspondent and his wife, allowed us to camp in their parlor until we were able to find rooms.

As it turned out our little visit with them was longer than we believed it would be. We had several thousand rubles and could well afford to pay for a hotel room. But such is the contradiction of existence in sovietland that the hotels in the capital wouldn't take the realm's own money.

Refuse to Use U. S. Money.

We were stubborn about our American money. We refused to pay $8 or $10 a day for a room that would be high at 75 cents in the United States. So it was necessary for us to remain three days as reluctant guests of the correspondent and his wife.

During this period it was forcibly borne in on our minds that we were in really serious trouble with the government. The second day we met Mr. Andreychen and Mr. Litschitz, both of Amtorg (soviet trading corporation), and told them of the treatment accorded us in Tashkent.

They had been kind to us when we first arrived from the border and had used their influence to get back for us the $600 deposit which we made on the automobile when we entered the country.

Angry About Selling Car.

When these officials learned that we had sold the automobile to the Georgian Sovnarcom they became severe. Had the Moscow government, they asked, given the Georgians permission to buy a car on which no duty had been paid?

If not, they said, we would have to pay back the rubles we received for it and would have to hand over the $600 as duty. As for the car, we would have no claim for it. Altogether we stood to lose about $1,500 on the deal.

It was difficult for these gentlemen to convince us, much as we liked them, that a governmental branch as powerful as the Georgian Sovnarcom couldn't buy one automobile without getting permission from a central committee in Moscow.

Seek to Repurchase Car.

On Nov. 2 I left Mary L. in the capital and started for Tiflis. The Amtorg men told me to have Sovnarcom write for permission to repurchase the automobile. Even in making this trip I displeased Mr. Litschitz. For, through friends, I purchased my ticket and paid for it in rubles.

"That is a crime," said the soviet trading corporation executive. "Just a few weeks ago a law was passed to the effect that no foreigner can travel on the railroads in Russia unless his ticket is paid for in foreign currency."

Such a crime was more to my taste than paying thirty times what a ticket was worth, and I went on my trip regardless.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Statistics on stolen automobiles in Chicago [from police records for the 24 hours ending at midnight Saturday]: Cars stolen, 76; cars recovered, 80; recovered stripped, 18.

Sheriff F. J. Blackburn of Jacksonville, Morgan county, drove to Chicago Friday with a deputy, bringing a warrant for a fugitive who had forfeited a bond.

Saturday evening they left their automobile, in which they had their handcuffs, tear gas bombs and a rifle, parked in Washington street, near the county building, while they went to a loop hotel. Yesterday morning they discovered the car had been stolen.

They likewise discovered that they had only $2 between them, after paying their hotel bill. Sheriff Blackburn and his deputy stayed last night with an acquaintance on the south side. They are hoping to find the car today. The fugitive is still at large.

RUSSIA TRAPS CITY GRAFTERS; SIX TO BE SHOT

SEBASTOPOL, Russia, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Six employes of the city financial department today were sentenced to be shot for an "economic counter revolution" which took the form of large scale grafting.

Headed by the first assistant chief, all the accused were former officers or soldiers of white guard armies who catered to private dealers and speculators by reducing high taxes these classes should have paid the city, taking bribes in the form of produce and manufactured goods.

The chief was sentenced to a year of hard labor and six others, including a woman, to varying terms of imprisonment.

Forcing two employes and three customers to lie on the floor, three bandits with shotguns robbed a Walgreen drug store at 4300 Berkley avenue of $75 last night.

FASCISTS STORM CZECH BARRACKS; ONE SLAIN, 8 HURT

BRNO, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 22.—(AP)—One man was killed and eight were injured last night in an attack led by Lieut. Wiladislav Kobzinek on the military barracks here, with the intention of obtaining arms and ammunition.

Kobzinek, who is a Fascist, and 50 of his followers entered the military grounds after overpowering and disarming all the guards except one, who sounded an alarm. After a fight lasting 45 minutes, which aroused the whole town, the Fascists surrendered.

Led by Adventurers.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Bohumil Bradac, minister of defense, commenting tonight upon the attack upon the Brno military barracks, said that he regarded it as the action of persons who had been misled by political adventurers. He expressed pride over the readiness of the army and police.

TWO KINGS MEET; SEEK TO RESTORE GREECE'S EX-KING

Little Entente to Discuss Armaments Stand.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 22.—The little entente will get up on its hind legs this week when King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and his brother-in-law, King Carol of Rumania, get together at Sinaia palace to seek an understanding for a common front on the question of equal armaments which comes up at Geneva on Jan. 31.

An important side issue, diplomatic circles assert, will be a private conference concerned with the problem of restoration of former King George as the ruler of Greece. Such restoration, it was explained, would be immensely valuable to Jugo-Slavia, since a friendly Greek government would secure use of Saloniki harbor for Jugo-Slavia should circumstances demand.

Alexander, accompanied by Queen Marie, Carol's sister, and his foreign minister, Bosko Jettich, will arrive in Bucharest tomorrow and go immediately to Carol's country place, Sinaia. A visit this winter with the Balkans frozen up is unusual but it is a family visit, according to the official announcement which seeks to cloak the meeting as the usual closed Balkan mystery.

Peeved at Big Powers.

There will be dining and wining at Sinaia after which Carol and Alexander with the ministers of their respective governments will consult to decide how to keep control of armaments through a proposed commission from becoming too irksome.

It is no secret that the little entente, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, the successor states, was irritated by the fact that a few weeks ago at Geneva the big powers decided to give Germany juridical equal rights in armaments without consulting the little entente powers.

Two months ago a meeting of the little entente was held in Belgrade and a permanent secretariat set up to manage its affairs. But it is expected that the little entente will be given more consideration when important matters come up at Geneva, since they will be more united.

King Alexander is especially anxious to get Rumania's backing on a protest which Jugo-Slavia plans to raise against Italy's alleged pouring of machine guns and munitions into Hungary through Austria.

The Touchy Trau Subject.

Carol and Alexander, it is reported, will also consider the rôle which Rumania through the little entente is supposed to be playing as mediator in the Italo-Jugo-Slavian rumpus, which arose from the maltreatment of the Italian stone lions at Trau. Rumania, although a member of the little entente, at the same time is on good terms with Premier Mussolini and just recently Rumania renewed a treaty of arbitration and friendship with him.

Pomp and protocol will mark Alexander's arrival here. Carol left a couple of days ago for Sinaia. Alexander is said to be showing his usual courage at leaving his country at this time, for his country's internal politics is in about the same precarious disorder as is Carol's.

Mexican Troops Clash with Farmers; Two Killed

ACTS TO CLEAR COURT DOCKET OF OLD BANK CASES

Prystalski Warns Courtney and Defendants.

A campaign to force to trial some of the bank cases which have been pending in the criminal courts for as long as two years, was announced yesterday by Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court. The judge said he wants to clear the dockets of the old cases.

The City State bank case, involving Attorney Seymour Stedman, one time Socialist candidate for mayor, and seven other defendants, which has been on the dockets since April 29, 1931, is scheduled to go to trial today before Judge Thomas J. Lynch. Although Assistant State's Attorneys John O'Hara and Earle C. Hurley are prepared to start trial, a move for a further continuance was seen by the announcement that a change of venue will be sought in behalf of Alexander Jaremа, former vice president and cashier of the bank.

Judge Opposes Long Delay.

It was indicated, however, that Chief Justice Prystalski will soon find another judge to act in the case and that in the event the change of venue petition is granted, that not much delay will result.

The defendants are charged with accepting deposits while knowing the bank was insolvent. The bank was an outgrowth of the old Coöperative Society of America, and failed Nov. 2, 1929. Charges of conspiracy originally were made against fifteen defendants, but the insolvency charge is aimed against the officers and board of directors.

Two of the defendants, Frank A. Bergen, a vice president and trust officer, and B. J. Johnson, a director, are to be granted separate trials. It was indicated that they will be witnesses for the prosecution.

Record Shows Delays.

The record, showing how the case has dragged through the various courts since the return of the indictment, is as follows:

Stanton Leaves Court.

Judge Stanton left the Criminal court at this time and when the case came up again in the fall term it appeared on the call of Chief Justice Prystalski. Further orders are as follows:

Sept. 13, held on call by Judge Prystalski.
Oct. 14, continued by agreement to Oct. 17.
Oct. 17, assigned to Judge Lynch and continued by agreement to Nov. 16.
Nov. 16, continued by agreement to Dec. 19.

The defendants in the case, who are scheduled to go to trial are Stedman, Jarema, Frank D. Robinson, a vice president; William C. Hartray, Edward G. Reilihen, and Morrison H. Castle.

"The dockets of this court are in good condition except for the so-called bank cases," said Chief Justice Prystalski. "I have notified the state's attorney and the defense attorneys in these cases that they must be disposed of within the next few weeks."

Three Inches of Rain Puts Indiana Rivers at Flood

Petersburg, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Three inches of rain which fell here in twenty hours has caused all streams to pass flood stage. Train service between here and Evansville on the Terre Haute division of the Big Four railroad has stopped because of washouts. Both Patoka and White rivers are rising rapidly and are overflowing low bottoms. Farmers are moving live stock to the hills. River men predict higher waters than any time since 1913.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

ILLUSION:

In this startling trick, the magician seemingly pushes a huge threaded needle through the body of an assistant, pulling the needle out the other side, followed by the thread.

EXPLANATION:

Under the clothes of the victim is a pipe, extending around one side of his body from front to back. The needle, which is flexible, is inserted in the front end of the pipe, is carried around the body and emerges from the pipe in back. This operation is performed so quickly that the audience does not notice that the needle and thread are momentarily shortened during the act.

It's fun to be fooled — ...it's more fun to KNOW

We like tricks...but we prefer to keep them out of business.

THE EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes burn slowly. They're cool. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They're hot.

Camels are carefully wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane...in the famous, air-tight Humidor Pack. Camels are cool because they're fresh and full of natural moisture.

A cigarette blended from choice non-irritating tobaccos also gives a cooler effect than one that is harsh and acrid. The finer the tobacco the less irritating it is, and therefore the "cooler."

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is why Camels are cool and mild, non-irritating—full of flavor. This is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made. It's the tobacco that counts.

Keep the famous welded Humidor Pack on your Camels. It assures you a fresh, cool smoke.

POLICE LAUNCH DRIVE ON PETTY THEFT RACKETS

Find Con Men Stoop to Swindling Children.

Hard times turn confidence men to petty graft, said Chief of Detectives Schoemaker yesterday. Some confidence men, he said, have even sunk to defrauding children.

After he received a report of a dozen such complaints from Lieut. John McGinnis, head of the confidence game detail, Chief Schoemaker ordered special activity to clean up the situation before the World's Fair opens.

"Unless we start now," he said, "the city will be flooded with these peanut con men, preying on visitors to the fair. 'Yellow Kid' Weil and most of the rest of the internationally known confidence men started out with these petty rackets.

A Page from Con History.

"Weil and his partner, Fred Buckminster, known as 'The Deacon,' worked such a scheme on Weil's own friends years ago. Buckminster pretended to be a detective, leading Weil down the street in handcuffs. Weil would stop a friend, say that he had been arrested, and plead for a loan of $5 to put with $20 which he already had, so that he could post bail. He worked the scheme on a dozen friends a day before they got wise to him."

Some of the petty frauds reported to Lieut. McGinnis, as the police reports described them, follow:

"William Boelter, 13 years old, 1724 North Sawyer avenue, was on his way to pay the family electric light bill when a man stopped him and asked where he was going. When William told him, the man said: 'Give me the money. I'm going to pay my bill, and I'll pay yours too.' William gave him the bill and $5. The bill was never paid.

"Helen Lindermyer, 12 years old, 819 North Drake avenue, purchased some meat in a market and got $1.57 in change. A girl who was standing in the store followed her and told her that the butcher would give her 25 cents to run an errand. She told Helen to give her the $1.57 as security, and to go back to the butcher, and that when she returned from the errand, she would get her deposit back. The butcher told Helen he knew nothing about the errand.

"Mrs. Bessie Deutsch, 1306 South Albany avenue, gave three men $300 for what they represented as ten Russian diamonds. The diamonds turned out to be glass.

"Mrs. Margaret B. Egawaitt has an embroidery shop at 4621 Wentworth avenue. A man entered and bought a scarf for $1.50, giving a $20 bill in payment. Then he changed his mind and said his wife would come and pick out the scarf. He returned the change and got the $20 bill back. When Mrs. Egawaitt counted the change she got back, it was $11 short. She chased the man, but he was a good runner.

Fruit Store Owner Swindled.

"Louis Kadar, 556 West 120th street, owner of a fruit store, was asked by a man to deliver some fruit and to bring change for a $20 bill. When he delivered it, the man took the change and said he would get the $20 bill from his wife. He never returned.

"Mrs. W. L. Tinsley, 615 East 37th street, was walking at 37th street and South Park way when a package dropped from an automobile. A Negro picked it up. Another Negro motioned Mrs. Tinsley forward and said, 'We are in on this.' They talked Mrs. Tinsley into putting up $23 as security for her share of the bundle. Her share was a lot of waste paper. This is the old 'pigeon dropper' game.

"Sophie Tadejezich, 1624 Orchard street, got $4.37 in change in a butcher shop. A girl and boy followed her on the street and told her that the butcher had short changed her. They told her to give them the change she had, and they would go back and get the right amount. When she returned to the butcher shop, the butcher knew nothing about it.

He Gets a Bouncing Check.

"Charles Pickartz, 1304 Nelson street, rented a flat to a man who gave him a $50 check for the first month's rent. He gave the man $30 in change. The check was rubber.

"James Gregory, 4943 St. Lawrence avenue, met a man who promised him a job if he would pay $14.50 for a chauffeur's uniform. He gave the man the money, but didn't see him for several days. Then he met him in the loop and had him locked up.

"Anthony Schwemin, 5321 South Wells street, met a man on the street who said he was broke and offered to sell a 21 jewel watch for $5. Anthony gave him the money. The watch was worthless.

"Charlotte Anderson, 1633 North Maplewood avenue, reports that a man came to her candy store, represented himself as agent for a well known candy company, and offered to decorate her showcase and put an electric clock in her window. She gave him $6 and got a receipt. That's all she got.

Short Change Artist Scores.

"Clara Schuller, 712 Rush street, was working in the Vassar House tearoom, 540 North Michigan avenue, when a man came in and bought some cigarets, giving her a $20 bill. After she had given him his change, he discovered that he had a $1 bill, and asked her to take the price of the cigarets out of it. After the exchange, Clara discovered she was short $10.

"When somebody tells you you're going to get something for nothing," commented Chief Schoemaker, after looking over the reports, "you generally end up by getting nothing for your something."

AUTO DRIVER SENTENCED.

BOY, 4, RUNS TO MEET PLAYMATE; KILLED BY AUTO

Police Lieutenant Is Hurt in Lake Forest.

For the second time in a month death struck yesterday at the home of Trigve Anderson, 1843 North Kimball avenue. A month ago Anderson's wife, Marie, died of pneumonia following the birth of a baby boy, Albert. There were four other children, Arthur, 4 years old; Roy, 7; Harold, 10, and Olaf, 12.

Yesterday the family attended church. On the way home, Arthur, the 4 year old son, sighted a playmate across the street from his home. He darted into the street just as an automobile approached. Arthur was struck, and the driver, Dr. A. M. Purvis, 4453 North Central Park avenue, took him to the Lutheran Memorial hospital. Arthur died there a short time later. The doctor was not held.

This death increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 51.

Police Lieutenant Hurt.

Police Lieutenant P. J. Knox of the West North avenue station was seriously injured last night when his automobile was forced off the road in West Lake Forest. His wife, Sherry, 45 years old, and his cousins, Misses Ann and Katherine Loughry, of 6501 North Claremont avenue, were also hurt, and all were taken to the Alice Home hospital.

Lieut. Knox's chest was injured, Mrs. Knox suffered arm and leg fractures, and Miss Ann Loughry, a buyer for a loop store, suffered a fracture of the nose.

Lieut. Knox had just left the home of the Rev. J. K. Fielding, 991 South Waukegan avenue, Lake Forest, and was driving south in Waukegan avenue when he was forced to drive into a ditch to avoid a collision with a north bound car.

Three Cars Upset in Crash.

Three automobiles were overturned in a collision in the Grant park inner drive at 8th street last night. George H. Gage, 35 years old, of 938 East 41st street was critically injured.

The other two cars in the collision were driven by Anthony Zuccarelli, 32 years old, of 9714 Avenue G, and Mrs. Mildred Miller, 24, of 3323 West 66th street. He and Mrs. Miller were bruised. Mrs. Miller, like Gage, was south bound. Zuccarelli was north bound. Sergt. Mat Connelly of the South park force began an investigation. Gage was taken to St. Luke's hospital.

Peter Vrettreoger, 25 years old, 4342 Bernard avenue, was seriously injured yesterday in an automobile-street car collision at Clark street and Berteau avenue. His sister, Barbara, 20 years old, and Ignatius Golden, 1859 Cleveland avenue, driver of the automobile, suffered minor injuries.

BANDITS MAKE SECOND SEARCH; FOUR CAPTURED

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Not satisfied with jewelry valued at $2,000 and $250 in cash, four robbers began a second search of their victims at a Bronx card party early today and before they finished the police arrived.

One of them was shot in the chest and right arm in the ensuing battle and another was seriously injured when he leaped from the second floor window.

The other two were captured. Arraigned later on robbery charges they described themselves as Daniel Orzack, 32, and Irving Fink, 31, and were held without bail.

In a hospital, police said, were David Moltz, 28, suffering from gunshot wounds, and Herman Rosen, 26, with a fracture of the skull, internal injuries and fractures of both legs.

Abraham Braunstein, a tailor, his wife and twelve guests were playing cards when the invaders walked into their apartment. One wore a mask and the others had dark glasses.

Another tenant, hearing a commotion, telephoned police and a squad of detectives arrived in radio patrol cars just as the intruders were completing their second search.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

REFORM OF RAILROAD POLICY.

Twenty-one years ago the elder Robert La Follette procured the passage of an act imposing upon the interstate commerce commission the task of placing upon all railroad property a valuation. This, when accomplished, was to be the basis for rate making. This colossal task is not yet completed. It never will be. Valuations made are now at least fifteen years behind. They always will be behind. The plan, plausible as it seemed to its proponents, is impracticable.

But thus far it has cost the federal treasury 42 million dollars, and the railroads, which by the act were required to contribute to the expense of the undertaking, 142 millions. But expenditure continues. For the fiscal year ending June, 1933, congress appropriated $2,750,000 for this futility, about one-third of the interstate commerce commission's total budget.

It is no wonder, then, that a bill was introduced in the present congress, and has been favorably reported to the house by the committee in charge, to do away with this costly project, and to relieve the commission of prescribing rates upon the basis of this valuation and the task of bringing the valuations down to date. It also provides for the repeal of the recapture clause, another experiment in railroad regulation which is wrong in principle as well as costly in result.

Shippers as well as railroad investors urge the passage of this relief, relief to the taxpayers as well as to the railroads. It is to be hoped it will not fail of passage at this session. Postponement means more money and effort wasted.

In fact, as THE TRIBUNE has repeatedly urged, there should be a fundamental reconsideration and reform of our policy regarding the railroads. Congress has been forcing the railroads to operate at a loss while lending them money to escape the logical consequences of its own action. This foolish paradox should be ended. The railroads should be allowed to earn their own living. They are being strangled by restraints and regulations which injure them and the public as well. No commission can make and adjust the complicated rate fabric of a great continent. The attempt only fixes a rigid framework which is in the long run death to a living organism. Protection from abuses can be given without imposing upon a government agency the impossible task which the interstate commerce commission has been expected to accomplish. The railroads, every one agrees, are still the backbone of our transportation system, and should be maintained in a healthy condition. They should be given freedom and encouragement to develop with changing conditions, to earn a reasonable profit, and thus to obtain means for improvements beneficial not only to them but to the public.

INDUSTRIAL REHABILITATION.

There is much to be said for the plan under which the industrial rehabilitation committee is operating, and much to be said in recognition of its accomplishments to date. The committee, headed in this federal reserve district by Mr. James D. Cunningham, is attempting with much success to induce manufacturers whose plants have not been maintained at the usual level of efficiency in recent years to modernize their equipment. Many corporations find themselves in possession of ample depreciation and obsolescence reserves with which rehabilitation programs could be financed, but have hesitated to spend the money set aside for precisely this purpose. It was with the idea of putting this money to work that the committee was created.

It is certain that when business improves the costs of necessary plant repairs and replacements will be higher than they are today, and it is also certain that when business improves these repairs will have to be undertaken if competition is to be met. The only manufacturer who can logically argue against rehabilitation now is the manufacturer who is convinced that the depression is to continue indefinitely and that the outlook is utterly hopeless.

Of course, plant rehabilitation alone will not end the depression, but it can help considerably. It can provide a good many thousand jobs to men now on the charity rolls. The success of the movement in this area can contribute materially to a general business recovery.

BABE RUTH'S PAY.

Babe Ruth, the great swatter, has returned to the management of the New York Yankees a contract offering him $50,000 for the season of '33. Mr. Ruth, in spite of admittedly ailing dogs and weakened knees, knows that he has home runs in his system, that people are going to pay to see him hit the pill, and he is convinced that $25,000 is entirely too much to cut off his pay.

There is, of course, a publicity value in this pre-season quarrel between the hitter and his managers. Mr. Ruth may not be worth $75,000 this summer, but he will earn more than $50,000. If he makes a hot stove rumpus at this time he attracts attention to his market value before they begin to dust the plate. It may not be the intention of the management to provide this pre-season newsprint, although very likely it is. Fifty thousand dollars is a heck of a lot of money. Many a man who ate breakfast on his yacht on his way to work in 1929 would be glad to have half of it annually for the next ten years assured to him. But the Babe knows the days are coming when he will be worth nothing except as an attraction at a filling station or, if the 18th amendment is repealed, in a white apron, setting them up behind a bar. He can still hit them, even if it's getting to be a longer run around the bases every month. But when he is out, he is out. It is the penalty attached to any art requiring youth as its first essential. It is true of the prize fighter, of the opera singer, the professional beauty, the charmer of kings, and the baseball player. Their sun is very bright when it is at its zenith, but their post-meridian days are very early and their twilight may be very, very long.

RECEIVERSHIPS.

The Bar association has performed, rather tardily, an important public service, and also a clear duty, in calling attention to the gross abuse of charges in receivership cases. It is incontestable that, as a supplemental report asserts, "these are times of intense financial distress," and "if ever the bar were called upon to exercise restraint in the matter of fees, if ever the bench were called upon to be vigilant in protecting the unfortunate, it is now."

It is a deplorable fact that this restraint and this vigilance have been wanting in far too many cases, and the situation needs immediate correction. The Bar association presents a schedule of fees which, in the opinion of the majority of its committee, would be fair. A minority proposes lower charges, and this also should be considered. Proper compensation should not be denied for often onerous and difficult services performed, but abuses should be drastically eliminated. We cannot absolve the courts from responsibility for these abuses, for they are the chief and final protection of all parties and should be alert to enforce equity upon all concerned. We hope the Bar association's commendable appeal will have immediate and adequate results.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS.

The failure of the United States Chamber of Commerce to impress the views of American business upon the representatives of the people in congress during these years of depression is a fact too striking to pass in silence. If the millions who are idle today are ever to find work they will have to be employed by business men. Obviously, too, the business managers of the country cannot afford to increase pay rolls if turnover and profits continue to decline. It follows that now, in greater degree than ever, the general welfare and the welfare of business enterprises are one and the same; and in such a situation the voice of American business ought to be loud and clear, for that is the voice which must be followed if we are to have a prompt recovery.

The failure of the national chamber to serve as a guide is probably attributable in large part to two circumstances. One is that the organization exists today because it has existed and not because it was called into being to meet the emergency. Therefore its attention is not centered upon the emergency. The second and probably the more important explanation of the chamber's ineffectiveness is its subservience to official influences in the government. At a time when it is abundantly clear that the sins of omission and commission of the government in taxation and expenditures have prolonged and deepened the depression it is clear that the interests of business and industry will not be adequately represented by an organization which is in any way subject to governmental opinion.

Editorial of the Day

[Translated from New York Forward.]

In the early years of the world war the Germans coined a saying to the effect that "England is prepared to fight Germany to the last Frenchman." Similarly one might say of our American "liberals" of the Nation and New Republic stripe that they are willing to battle for the "noble experiment" in soviet Russia unto the last Russian. So keen is their enthusiasm for Stalin's enterprise that they are quite disposed to sacrifice three-fourths of the Russian people if only the "noble experiment" might be thereby tested thoroughly.

What matters it to them that Russian peasants and workingmen are perishing of hunger and cold, that they are a thousand times more enslaved than under the most tyrannical of czars? Alas and alack! After all the Russians are only barbarians; they have no need of "civil liberties." They have long been accustomed to being "experimented on." And so—"Long live Stalin!" . . .

In a recent issue of the New Republic a reader puts this question to the editors: Why they censure so sharply the American police for their treatment of the hunger marchers in Washington, and yet have not a word of condemnation to utter against the bolshevik terror? "What would happen," he asks, "if three thousand Russian hunger marchers tried to march on the Kremlin to present a petition to Stalin?" To which the editor of the "liberal" weekly makes this response: "The soviets are a dictatorship of the proletariat. What would happen if three thousand bourgeois marched on the Kremlin? They would be efficiently suppressed [not executed; the day of mass executions has passed in Russia]. What would happen if three thousand proletarians marched on the Kremlin? They wouldn't do so, because the soviets are their own government. But if they ever did march, the government would yield to them, or cease to be communist."

A great pity that the editor of the New Republic has heard nothing about the famine raging in Russia; or about the horrible peonage which has been imposed on industrial workers, peasants, and the professional "intelligentsia," just as nothing has reached his ears concerning the wholesale arrests of communists, and even of communist leaders, because they dare to express the opinion that Stalin's policies are driving Russia to ruin. What, for instance, do such men as Rakovsky, Kamenieff, Zinovieff, Smirnov, Rykov, or Tomsky know about the meaning of communism? Or of the meaning of "dictatorship of the proletariat," or of what is now taking place in the soviet union? Ask the editors of the Nation and of the New Republic—they know better.

KNEW HIS MANNERS.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

AND MAYBE THE REASON the Filipinos don't seem to want liberty after the U. S. A. has offered it to them is that they have to vote on it. Liberty that is voted on, like beer or tariff or dog pelter or justice of the peace, doesn't appeal to the Filipinos. Liberty is something that has to be won on the red field of battle after a lot of burning oratory, flag waving, and noble suffering. Before a people get liberty they feel that they've got to do a lot of things that will make good stuff for history and for recitation in schools. There's got to be Arnold von Winkelrieds and Horatiuses at the Bridge and Paul Reveres and bloody footprints in the snow and Boston massacres and Barbara Frietchies and things like that. Just going out and voting for liberty doesn't seem to have any kick. The Filipinos battled to the death with Spain for liberty and with the U. S. A. after America bought the Philippine revolution for twenty million dollars from Spain. They had martyrs and heroes and last ditch struggles and everything. And they'd probably be willing to fight again. But vote for liberty? Who wants the darned thing if they have to vote for it?

HOW FAR TO CHILDHOOD TOWN?

"How far is it to Childhood Town?"
Bright Ethel asked of me,
Not knowing of the pain she gave—
My heart she could not see;
For, as I sought, in simple words,
To please her eager ears
A tear broke past unwilling eyes
That looked on other years.

How far is it to Childhood Town?
Oh, many miles, my child!
Beyond the Mountains of Defeat,
Where blasted hopes are piled;
Beyond the Vale of Sorrow, where
The trees with blight are brown.
Far, far away that happy place
We once called Childhood Town.

How far is it to Childhood Town?
Far past the sun-scorched plain
Where thronging men, with hearts inflamed,
Wage war for sordid gain;
Far o'er the Sea, where many ships
Have stranded and gone down.
Oh, far away that happy realm,
Our own dear Childhood Town!

THOSE TECHNOCRATS have got hold of a machine that explains all about technocracy in loud, piercing tones. But even after people buy the dinged thing and sit in front of it and listen for three hours they will probably say as they shut it off, "But what I want to know is has an erg got four legs and does it bark like a dog or is it covered with feathers and does it lay eggs like a hen?"

AND, ANYHOW, the Techs. can never make the thing popular until they get a good theme song, "Lemme Be Your Lovin' Erg" or "My Heart and My Ergs Are All Yours, Baby Doll." Now with a good hot theme song like that steaming over the radio and jumping out at the movies, technocracy would get an awful boost.

THE STYLE CZARS say the well dressed gal must change at once into mid-Victorian gowns—high waist line, wide shoulders, subdued colors, and leg of mutton sleeves. We can visualize how the gals will look in their new togs—all except the leg of mutton sleeves. It's been so long since we saw a great, nice, fat leg of mutton, all brown and steaming and the juice fairly oozing out of it, that we can't get a mental picture of what the mid-Victorian sleeves will look like. Wish the dressmakers would order pork chop sleeves or hot dog sleeves for the gals' new dresses. We know in a split second what pork chop sleeves would look like; or hot dog sleeves. And how!

A WILL WAS FILED last week in Milwaukee in which the testator wrote he forgave all his debtors. We're perfectly willing to forgive our debtors when we prepare to cross the Styx, but we're not going to forgive radio crooners. There's a hate we'll carry with us, and if Charon takes a crooner in his boat on our voyage across the river—well, one of us is going to get out, that's all.

NO VOICE . . . NO CRY . . .

I dream
You are a nun,
In veils of white, serene:
In novice robes like Heloise,
As pure.
. . . . . .
Your hands
Are in warm worlds,
Cool streams. Your nearness is
Exquisite. Life is but a touch
Of dream.
. . . . . .
Your lips—
Pale porphyry,
Are cold as uncarved
Stone. Quiet as an acolyte
At dawn.
. . . . . .
Waking,
I see the veil
And crucifix of gold
Are gone. You wear a tinsel dress . . .
And laugh.

THE SAFETY OF CLAMS.

THE men in the shell fish industry have claimed that clams were safe to eat at all times and in all places, regardless of where they were found or how they were marketed. This does not apply to those that are dead and decomposing, but the industry claimed that the nose and taste organs were all a man required to protect himself against this danger; that the man who ate clams that looked spoiled, smelled bad, and tasted worse was too dumb to live, and the community had no business protecting such a person. They said that clams were so constituted biologically and chemically that they rapidly destroyed typhoid bacilli and other disease germs wherever they found them.

Scientists were loath to believe that clams had any such superpower, and yet they were confronted by weighty evidence. Clams grow in places that a self-respecting oyster would not like to be found dead in. No authority would permit oysters grown in such surroundings to be offered for sale. But clams from areas forbidden for oyster growth are found to have lower bacterial counts than oysters from far better locations. Oysters have pretty high bacterial counts from May until shortly before Thanksgiving, even though they are grown in tolerably good waters, but during that period the bacterial counts of clams are lower.

In the days when epidemics were being traced to oysters, clams were not often proved to have caused either typhoid or outbreaks of the diarrheas that serve as temporary protection against typhoid.

The scientists concede that the old clam men had much basis for their contention, but they still hold that there is some danger in eating clams that do not measure up to standards in methods of production and marketing.

These methods consist in sanitation of breeding and growing grounds, washing the products in chlorinated water, and the latest method—quick freezing at low temperatures. This does not include canning, in which process all bacterial life of importance must be destroyed else the product will not be marketable.

Marketed clams are increasingly conforming to these requirements, though they are somewhat behind oysters in that. Clams are even richer than oysters in iodine. The difference, however, is not great. The two are in a group which ranks at the top of the habitually used sea foods.

Salmon has been demonstrated to be a good cure for pellagra and a protective against the disease. The question arises, if salmon has this quality, why not clams? Many drunkards think clam juice is a cure for the katzenjammer. This reputation it shares with milk. Of course, the alcoholic who stops eating is in immediate danger and clam juice may be nothing more than a something which toils him back to food. Again, drunkards are usually quite susceptible to suggestion, particularly auto-suggestion. If a man who seems to be headed for delirium tremens gets a notion that clam juice will save him, he had better have it.

FIND THE CAUSE FIRST.

A. O. C. writes: Our son, 12 years old, has had an itch for almost six months. He scratches nearly all the time and this has caused sores on his arms and body. What causes this itch, and what can we do to get rid of it?

REPLY.

Have your physician find the cause of this symptom. With this as a starting point cure should not be difficult.

CREAKING JOINTS.

A. H. writes: What causes creaking noises in the joints of the shoulders when raising the arms? I am 37 years old. Could this be a sign of age?

REPLY.

You have a chronic, mild, low grade arthritis of the shoulder. This is not a sign of age, though many old people have it.

UNPAID RENT.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I rented a flat for $15 a month to a man who works for the city and does not get paid. This man owes me $80. Can he move out and not pay me, or can I collect, and how? W. M.

His wages coming from the city are not subject to garnishment. The personal property exemption for the head of a family is $400 worth. Your chances of collecting would depend upon his assets.

BUILDING LOAN STOCK.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A few years ago I purchased $550 worth of paid up building loan stock with the understanding that they would buy it back any time by giving thirty days' notice. I did so and then waited sixty days, and they gave me $100 and said to call in thirty days. I did so and they gave me another $100. But I had to sign a note drawing 60 cents per month per hundred, borrowing my own money at the rate of $7.20 per year, and they stopped paying any interest as soon as I made my application for withdrawal. They informed me the law permitted them to do so. Are the laws made only for the building loan companies? Is there no protection for stockholders? J. W.

Your rights depend largely on the wording of your agreement with the association. If, under that wording, you are entitled to withdraw your money, and if you wish to force matters, then you should employ an attorney. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 23, 1917.

WASHINGTON.—Addressing the senate, President Wilson gave to the world an outline of the only terms on which he believes the European belligerents can conclude a lasting peace and of the conditions on which the United States, in his opinion, would join a league of nations to enforce peace. Mr. Wilson's utterance is interpreted as serving notice on the belligerents that the only sort of peace the United States will approve is a peace that can just as well be concluded now on the basis of a deadlocked contest as at any later time. Here are the general principles laid down by the President as underlying the only sort of peace the United States could approve: Abandonment of the policy of "balance of power." Equality in rights of all nations, big and little. Recognition of the principle that governments "derive all their just powers from the consent of the governed and that no right anywhere exists to hand peoples about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property." Freedom of small peoples, as, for example, "a united, independent, and autonomous Poland." "Direct outlet to the great highways of the sea" for "every great people" seeking development. "Freedom of the seas" to all nations "in practically all circumstances," which is "the sine qua non of peace, equality, and cooperation." Limitation of naval and military armament and "of all programs of military preparation."

WASHINGTON.—Allied circles here were much wrought up by the President's speech, their feelings hovering between doubt regarding just what he meant and resentment at alleged pro-German phrases in the speech. British diplomats were frankly disturbed by Mr. Wilson's advocacy of "freedom of the seas," and particularly by what they termed his giving precedence to the question of the limitation of naval armaments before taking up the question of limiting land forces. They said they saw in it a possible danger to the traditional British policy of the necessity for a two power standard of naval forces as essential to the safety of the British empire. These diplomats admitted that the first impression the speech would make in England was that it was pro-German, but they were quick to add that they knew a mature consideration of it would absolve the President of any deliberate unneutrality in the mind of the British public.

WAR SUMMARY.—Wireless distress signals from a British transport with 1,800 soldiers on board which had struck a mine and was sinking in the British channel were received in Rotterdam. Lloyd's reports nine more ships sunk by submarines. Petrograd reports that efforts of the enemy to advance in the Oituz valley failed. The Germans were beaten off in two attacks near Verdun, says the Paris war office. London reports progress in the effort to drive the Germans out of East Africa. A Russian submarine sank ten Turkish vessels in the Black sea.

SAN FRANCISCO.—For the first time in the history of the United States a foreign consul general, Frans Bopp, one of three consuls general of Germany in this country, was sentenced to prison and payment of a fine for violation of American neutrality. Judge William H. Hunt in the United States District court sentenced Bopp to two years in the federal prison at McNeil's island, Washington; one year in the county jail, and assessed an aggregate fine of $10,000 against him, the prison and jail terms to run concurrently. Three of Bopp's aids, Vice Consul E. H. von Schack, Lieut. George Wilhelm von Brincken, and C. C. Crowley, a war time secret agent, received like sentences. Mrs. Margaret W. Cornell, Crowley's secretary, was given concurrent prison and jail sentences of one year and one day and one year with no fines.

NEW YORK.—Charles E. Hughes was welcomed back to the practice of law in New York at a dinner given in his honor by the Association of the Bar of New York. Elihu Root, in his address of welcome, declared, "I am glad he is here, but I wish he were somewhere else." Other speakers were George L. Ingraham, John P. Clarke, and Francis Lynde Stetson.

THE JUVENILE COURT.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—I would like to comment on an editorial appearing in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Jan. 19 regarding the Juvenile court of Cook county. I wonder why the editor assumes that the court is lenient when it deals with a defective delinquent on the basis of his defect and commits him to a state institution for an indefinite period. A short term commitment merely means that the individual, still defective with delinquent tendencies, is at large again. One should assume that the institution to which he is committed will hold him.

Large numbers of adult offenders as well as juveniles are committed under this same law, and surely an institution which receives such offenders should be equipped to hold them. I have myself seen a bus full of men whom the sheriff was transporting from the county jail to one of the state institutions for the feeble-minded.

Several years ago a boy with an insane mother was committed by the Juvenile court to one of the state institutions for mental defectives. The boy was never released. However, some time later we received word that he was arrested on some minor charge and was serving a short term in the House of Correction. His mother, who was on parole from one of the hospitals for the insane, was so disturbed that, it seemed as though she would have to be returned to the hospital unless the boy could be placed in permanent custody. I wrote to the House of Correction and to the sheriff and suggested that the boy be returned to the institution for the feeble-minded. I did this for the protection of society, as a short sentence in the House of Correction did not offer that protection. I do not know whether he was transferred or not. Some months later I heard that he was in the county jail and later I received word that he was in Pontiac. I imagine that he will shortly be at large again, having served his sentence. He will still be a defective delinquent and a menace to the community.

As to the leniency with which the Juvenile court deals with offenders in general, I can only say that over and over again I interview parents who complain because this court will not release a child from an institution to which he has been committed. Their complaint is that adults arrested at the same time for participation in the same offense are at large while their child is still institutionalized. IRENE KAWIN, Deputy Chief Probation Officer.

THEIR OWN MEDICINE.

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 16.—In case the currency is inflated by the issuance of new money of any kind, the value of which is open to the least doubt, all government officials, including senators and congressmen, should be forced to accept this new money exclusively in payment of their salaries, fees, and allowances of all kinds. GUY HAYTHORN.

SUNDAY CONCERT.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—I am most grateful to the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, W-G-N, for broadcasting the delightful two hours of concert music every Sunday afternoon. ROBERT J. FICHT JR.

THE SALES TAX.

River Forest, Ill., Jan. 10.—After reading the governor's inaugural message as reported in this morning's TRIBUNE, I wish to comment on his proposal of just another tax, the sales tax for unemployment relief.

After putting in ten years of good faithful service I and about thirty thousand others were forced to join the ranks of the unemployed. All my life I have made it a habit to save. I own real estate and pay high taxes and have enough cash to last me during just about one year of unemployment. After that I stand to lose my home and everything else I own. My family has always been well clothed, housed in a comfortable home and given good educational facilities. I have given freely to the Red Cross and other charitable relief funds.

I have never applied for one cent of relief and never will, as my relatives would probably take care of us before an appeal would be made to charity. A large percentage of the unemployed are similarly fixed, either living on reserve, with relatives, or making a small amount by trying to sell.

What will a state sales tax do in my case? It means that I would have to draw more money out of my reserve, which I had hoped would tide me over until better times, just to help the fellow who did not save. Is this an equitable tax?

Let's inaugurate measures which will reduce all governmental expenditures, state, local and federal, to about half of what they now are. In my opinion this would give quicker relief by reducing the burden of all of us. ONE OF THE UNEMPLOYED.

THE NEWBERRY FUNERAL.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—The editorial entitled "Hoodlum Post No. 1" should receive the strongest commendation from every true American. Members of the American Legion must realize that the Yarmo-De Vere post is guilty of the most disgraceful action in the history of the American Legion. JOSEPH PURVIS.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Your editorial, "Hoodlum Post No. 1," was certainly fine. Congratulations. As a Legionnaire since 1920, I agree with you.

Now about the posts that have among their members the gentle bond salesmen who sold the Kreuger & Toll debentures, and the H. O. Stone officials, and so on. How about them? Newberry was a lot cleaner than the rat who sucks widows' funds for gyp securities—don't you think? HENRY BOWERS.

THE ART INSTITUTE.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 15.—The so-called artists of Chicago and vicinity are again rampant at the Art institute. It is of interest to note that the slobbydobbies are not in complete domination this year. There are some excellent paintings and bits of sculpture. And mixed with them, however, is a large number of contributions which lead one to fear that contact with a goofy house has been made. Among the pathogenic smears submitted by the slobbydobbies are, The Halitosis Twins, Child with Rickets, Wall-Eyed Winnie, Moss the Moron, Mlle. Odorosa, and Gastro Intestinal Clinic. ALFRED B. ANDREWS.

OUR SECRET AMBITION.

CHICAGO DEBATE ON PROTESTANT MISSIONS BEGUN

Presbyterian Leader Raps Laymen's Report.

Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York, Presbyterian missions leader, yesterday brought to Chicago the controversy over Protestant foreign missions which has been precipitated by the report of a laymen's commission appointed to study the subject. Speaking at a massmeeting in the Fourth Presbyterian church, Dr. Speer had some kind words for the sincerity of the commission and many critical ones for its report.

Sweeping changes in the whole structure of Protestant missions are suggested in the report, which was drawn up by the laymen's commission under the leadership of Prof. William E. Hocking of Harvard university after an inquiry financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The first of three major alterations proposed in the report is a change in the theology underlying foreign missions from the old evangelistic concept of "saving the heathen" to a more modern "humanism." The second change proposed is a merger of all Protestant foreign mission properties, and the third a centralized government for the missions of all denominations.

Test of Good Judgment.

"There could not be a more high minded group of men than that which carried through this inquiry," said Dr. Speer in his address. "It is difficult also not to lose sight of the fundamentals underlying this report. There is a great test of candor and good judgment in it, for it is hard to judge fairly what we do not agree with, and we must take care not to diverge from the basic points.

"This report criticizes the great missions of our churches because they are over evangelistic. Almost every reference in it is deprecatory to evangelism. Yet think back to the day centuries ago in Rome, when a band of men set out to visit the little groups organized here and there by St. Paul.

"Think what would have happened had they determined that these little churches contained nothing that was of value for future generations. In them was a force that would reform the world, built up by word of mouth e-by evangelism.

Defends the Missionaries.

"There is criticism in this report of the missionary personnel. I have a quarrel with the statement that the great body of missionaries are men and women of limited ability. The great majority of missionaries are far above the average—the best single company of men and women to be found in the world today.

"This report advocates a new doctrinal basis, which many greet joyfully. But our evangelistic tradition is that Christ stands alone and not on an equal basis with Buddha or Mohammed. The Christian faith to us is the full and final expression of God and his Son, Jesus Christ."

"The report advocates unified control of Protestant missions. Many of us do not believe any longer in the infallibility of corporate groups. For myself, I believe in decentralization—believe it is the wise and good way to handle our missions."

Dr. Speer also spoke before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall last night.

5 BANDITS LOOT LUTHERAN HIGH SCHOOL'S SAFE

Five masked bandits climbed a telephone pole to a third floor window of the Luther institute at 120 North Wood street late last night, held the janitor, his wife, and two children prisoner, and looted the safe of an undetermined amount of money. The institute is a high school of the Lutheran church.

The watchman, Otto Ness, said the robbers were young men. One of the gunmen guarded Ness' wife, Margaret, and children, Rudolph, 11 years old, and Herbert, 7, while the other four forced Ness to lead them to the office.

There they smashed open the safe and looted it of the money. They took $2.50 from Ness and then fled. Detective John Donohue, fingerprint expert, obtained a dozen fingerprints of the thieves from the safe exterior and walls.

ROBBERS LEAVE VICTIM UNCLAD; POLICE HELP OUT

Sergt. Edward Tyrrell and his detective bureau squad saved John Jepsen from a chilly and embarrassing situation this morning and at the same time aided the cause of law and order. Jepsen, who lives at 1400 North Harding avenue and is a skater of note, was held up by two men at Lawndale and North avenues. They took all his clothing but his underwear and left him shivering in the morning cold.

Sergt. Tyrrell and his men came upon the scene. They caught up with the two robbers and nabbed one. The other escaped. The prisoner refused to give his name. But, most important to Jepsen, the thieves abandoned his clothes and he dressed himself within the shelter of the squad car.

STATE OF SIEGE IN NICARAGUA TO BE CONTINUED

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The government today announced a continuance of the state of siege under which all except four provinces were placed Saturday.

[Dispatches from San Juan del Sur Saturday said the senate had decreed a state of siege for all of the republic except the provinces of Rivas, Granada, Massaya and Carazo.]

The statement today said, "Inasmuch as the time limit of the state of siege declared previously expired today, the national congress unanimously voted a continuance in some departments."

It was added that the government had asked the congress to take such action because the activities of Gen. August Sandino's insurrectionists necessitated it and it was desired the government be invested with special constitutional power "in order to actively and energetically proceed with the work of complete pacification of the republic." Newspapers tonight published details o a communistic plot which was frustrated by the government with the arrest of 11 persons.

Since the recent withdrawal of the United States marines from Nicaragua there have been reports of trouble in the Nicaraguan national guard, a number of officers of which were placed under arrest two weeks ago. Yesterday troops clashed with Sandino rebels. Seventeen persons were killed.

REFUSES TO LET WIFE DRIVE CAR; SHE TAKES POISON

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Suffering from poison, Mrs. Esther Heeter, 26, employed as a maid in a Shorewood home, was brought to County Emergency hospital tonight by her husband, Walter. The couple have been separated since last June. The husband called for her today, he said, and they patched up their troubles. They drove to Menomonee Falls, and on the return trip the wife demanded she be allowed to drive the automobile, the husband said. She swallowed the contents of a bottle of poison when he refused, he told police.

RECIFE, Brazil, Jan. 22.—If citizens fail to pay their bills, if cooks lift a few pennies every day out of the market money, if cashiers and tellers disappear, unable to replace money they have appropriated, it is probably because of jogo do bicho [game of animal].

Brazilians have gone "bicho crazy." Everybody plays. Poor people act as brokers for bankers, and state governors daily play the "animal" they dream about at night.

In an attempt to curb the game, the government has enacted a federal law under which the 22 states have been ordered to cancel their tacit authorization of this rival of the national and state lotteries. The success of this prohibition, however, is dubious, because of the game's widespread popularity. The government also has restricted the federal drawings, heretofore conducted daily, to twice a week—Wednesday and Saturday—and states have been limited to Wednesday.

Invented 50 Years Ago.

Jogo do bicho, invented some 50 years ago by an enterprising Brazilian baron, is an unofficial offshoot of the federal lottery. It was operated first with 25 groups of two figures each ranging from 00 to 99. Today gamblers may play endless combinations of two, three, four, five and more figures either in straight or inverted order. The 25 groups are represented by animals [bichos] ranging alphabetically from aguia [eagle] to vacca [cow].

Payoffs go to holders of figures corresponding to the last two, three or four last numbers of the federal lottery, as well as to holders in the winning animal group. Odds are 23 to 1 for the right bicho; 80 to 1 for holders of dezena [the corresponding two figures]; 800 to 1 for centena [three figures], and 8,000 to 1 for milhar [four figures].

Bankers Reap Harvest.

Naturally bicho bankers reap a harvest and some maintain establishments rivaling banks in pretentiousness and cost of upkeep. Some luxurious offices are equipped with telegraph services and printing facilities, and keep platoons of clerks and brokers to handle the distribution. The game is even operated under the guise of installment houses. "Furniture dealers" in each of the state capitals, for example, collect weekly installments and hold two drawings daily.

Jogo do bicho represents to thousands of idle the means to pay a modest house rent and buy beans and farinha [vegetable meal]. So ingrown is bicho gambling that its prohibition by the government may stir open rebellion. Enforcement certainly will destroy the popularity of state governors and damage the authority of federal agents.

Already in every large town of Brazil protest meetings have been held, attended both by bankers and gamblers. In Rio de Janeiro 6,000 men and women who asserted their only income is derived from selling bicho staged a public demonstration.

Ten years ago a governor of Pernambuco prosecuted bankers and gamblers to suppress jogo do bicho. Riots and uprisings started immediately and ended in a small revolt which was stopped only after several persons had been killed and many wounded. Bicho continued as usual.

In the state of Para Federal Interventor Maj. Magalhaes Marata fought the national game for about a year by jailing scores of bankers and gamblers daily, but in vain. The people prevailed and today the city of Belem has a game of bicho three times a day.

FIND IDLENESS IN U. S. CAUSES INCREASE IN LIQUOR CONSUMPTION

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Heavier consumption of alcohol, "an alarming increase of apathy" and much more chronic irritability are some results of "the mental hygiene of idleness" reported tonight by the national committee for mental hygiene.

There are also a few benefits such as return to simple enjoyment "so recently scorned as Victorian."

The report is issued for guidance of the hundreds of thousands of relief workers, public officials, clergy and executives of philanthropic work.

It summarizes data gathered from all over the United States in the last three years, showing how the national "morale" has been affected and suggesting how to deal with these problems as cases of mental hygiene. It is compiled by George K. Pratt, M. D., of New York City.

"Widespread mass insecurity in the past," he says, "seems frequently to have been accompanied by a period of heavy consumption of alcohol, and from the partial evidence so far available, the present appears no exception."

RETURN 59 EXILED MONARCHISTS TO SPAIN FOR TRIAL

MADRID, Spain, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Fifty-nine monarchists, exiled to the African penal colony at Villa Cisneros, were being hurried to Madrid tonight to stand trial in connection with the abortive revolution of last August.

They arrived at Puerto Santa Maria, near Cadiz, today on a tugboat which was under the close surveillance of a gunboat. The deportees were permitted to land by threes under the vigilance of guards. Then they proceeded to the railroad station, where friends and relatives were allowed to greet them.

The exiles complained about being forced to travel third class, but all appeared comparatively happy. They said they did not learn of the escape on Jan. 1 of 29 of their fellows until authorities at Villa Cisneros began an investigation. Those who escaped landed recently at a Portuguese port.

Shot Down in Front of His Home by Hoodlums

John Castaldo, 31 years old, of 846 Vernon Park place, was taken to the Mother Cabrini hospital this morning suffering from a bullet wound in the face. The bullet entered the right cheek and veered downward, emerging through the left side of the neck. It was said, however, that he would recover. Castaldo told Policeman George Davis of the Maxwell street station that a gang of hoodlums attacked him in front of his home. He was found by his brother, Jerry.

FIERCE BATTLE STILL RAGING AT FORT IN CHACO

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Well informed sources said this evening that a battle at Fort Nanawa in the Gran Chaco was still raging fiercely, Paraguayan troops successfully holding at bay a Bolivian force estimated at 5,000 troops.

Bolivian casualties were said to be heavy, but definite figures were not given. The battle began Friday and it was reliably reported there had been no let up in the bitter conflict.

Fort Nanawa is in the heart of the Gran Chaco, over which Bolivia and Paraguay have long been engaged in a boundary controversy. It is considered of military importance because it controls military roads. It is near the Rio Verde, an important consideration in supplying water to the troops.

LOANS BY R. F. C. 43% OF ALL ITS CASH RESOURCES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The Reconstruction Finance corporation announced today that it has disbursed approximately 43 per cent of its total resources in actual cash.

Loans to date aggregate $1,648,622,393, according to a statistical summary issued by the corporation. Under the law, the maximum amount which the corporation may borrow on its initial capital of half a billion dollars is 3 billion 800 millions.

Of the total cash loans, however, the corporation stated that $317,288,072 has been repaid, leaving outstanding loans in the amount of $1,331,334,321.

Increase in December.

The summary disclosed a marked increase during December in the number of loan applications filed with the corporation by banks. It was the first gain in bank applications noted in any month since the peak in April and represented an increase of 171 from the total received in November. The December total was 633.

Banks continued the heaviest borrowers from the federal credit agency, according to the summary, having obtained a total in cash of $850,882,060. In addition to the cash disbursements, a total of $93,976,000 authorized to banks had not yet been collected by the borrowers. Bank repayments amounted to $256,284,353, while withdrawals or cancellations of loans already authorized totaled $52,905,684.

Cash Disbursements Listed.

Disbursed by secretary of agriculture to farmers for crop loans from funds furnished by R. F. C.	$ 64,204,503
Disbursed to secretary of treasury for purchase of stock of home loan banks	320,000
Disbursed to banks, insurance companies and other financial institutions	1,427,603,122
Disbursed to finance construction of self-liquidating projects	17,793,000
Disbursed to states for relief purposes	100,993,175
Disbursed to finance carrying and orderly marketing of agricultural commodities	1,439,974
Disbursed by regional agricultural credit corporations created by R. F. C. to farmers and stockmen	35,768,618

Made to secretary of agriculture by borrowers for crop loans	16,707,080
Made to R. F. C. by banks and financial institutions	299,907,122
Made to R. F. C. by borrowers to finance carrying and marketing of agricultural commodities	115,456
Made to regional agricultural credit corporations	558,412

Millions in Interest Paid.

At the end of 1932, according to the summary, the corporation had borrowed a total of one billion 310 million dollars from the treasury. Of that amount, it was explained, 500 million dollars was realized from the sale of its entire capital stock to the treasury and 810 million dollars from the sale of finance corporation notes, also to the treasury. At 3½ per cent on its notes, the corporation has paid a total of $7,608,904 in interest thus far, it was stated.

CHILDREN STILL ILL; BRUNKER TO DELAY HEARING

Albert R. Brunker, wealthy reformer, stated last night at his Lake Forest home that because of the continued illness of his two children they will be unable to appear today before Judge Charles A. Williams in the Superior court.

Brunker's ex-wife, Mrs. Margaret Gaylord Ruppel of Pasadena, has a writ of habeas corpus pending before Judge Williams in which she is seeking the custody of the children, Barbara, 7 years old, and Robert, 5, under the terms of her Reno divorce decree, which granted her and Brunker each custody of the children for six months of the year. Brunker refused to send them to her on Jan. 1, on the contention that they were ill of influenza.

Physicians retained by himself and Mrs. Brunker examined the children yesterday, Brunker said, and agreed that they were still in no condition to appear in court. The case has been continued several times for the same reason.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Thelma Todd, blonde movie actress, and her recently acquired husband, Pasquale de Cicco, were injured slightly today in a motor car accident. Miss Todd suffered a lacerated ear and a chest injury. They told police their car skidded in an effort to avoid collision with another machine and crashed against a tree.

MOUNTING LIST OF FEDERAL ACTS CLOGGING COURTS

our people who have been killed has increased since the first of July. During the year 1932 we had nine investigators killed in line of duty. Since the first of July we have had six more killed.

"To make the picture complete," Mr. Woodcock continued, "there are thirteen citizens that were killed by our men in their enforcement of this law during 1932."

Under questioning by Representative Clarence Cannon [Dem., Mo.] and Representative Blanton, Mr. Woodcock defended the practice of transferring criminal jurisdiction over agents charged with murder from state to federal courts. Attorney General William D. Mitchell, who supported him, said:

"It has been the practice of attorneys general for at least 75 years wherever a federal officer is indicted in a state court for an act committed while the officer was in the performance of his federal function, if the accused person wants it, to furnish the services of the United States attorney to defend him. If he does not want it, he can employ his own counsel.

"The statute that allows removal from the state courts to the federal courts is a statute that applies to revenue officers and prohibition officers, and I have noticed that the department has often been criticized for removing these cases. Congress has given the accused person that right. I have no control over that."

Representative George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] questioned Mr. Woodcock regarding the expenditure of $125,000 in 1932 for purchase of liquor as "evidence." Mr. Tinkham insisted that actually the agents purchasing the liquor were guilty of violating the dry laws. Mr. Woodcock refused to agree.

"Now, how much of this liquor that is bought is drunk by your employes?" asked the Massachusetts wet.

"I do not think," replied the dry chieftain, "that there is so much liquor drunk, even in the line of duty."

TWO MEN SLAIN IN CLEVELAND SALOON HOLDUP

Cleveland, O., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Two men were shot to death today when four masked robbers attempted to hold up a speakeasy occupied at the time by more than 70 men and women.

The dead are John Vecchio, 22, one of the robbers, and Michael M. Bobey, 23, said by police to have been a patron of the place.

Vecchio, witnesses said, was left alone to guard patrons on the lower floor of the building while the other three went upstairs. Bobey, detective Lieut. Alfred Jones was told, thought the holdup was a joke and started a scuffle with Vecchio which ended when Bobey was shot.

George Jacobs, described by police as one of the proprietors of the place, then drew a revolver and shot the robber. Patrons and the three remaining robbers fled.

Warm Climes Are Setting of Three Books

Hergesheimer Author of "Tropical Winter."

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Tropical Winter," by Joseph Hergesheimer. [Knopf.] Published Jan. 16.

"Hot Places," geographically, if not always slangily, "hot" fill the pages of three books hot off the presses, two volumes of short stories and one reminiscential record. In them Palm Beach, South America, and Sardinia are the physical backgrounds of spiritual turmoil.

ALAN PRYCE-JONES.

"Tropical Winter" contains ten short stories, all about Palm Beach, by a writer who made his reputation on his amazing sensitiveness of the senses. In the early days of his writing career no American writer was the master that Joseph Hergesheimer was of sounds, tactile impressions, smell, visual beauty — and ugliness — and taste. To this day the texture of the material in the gown of the heroine of "Java Head" is as vivid in my mind as it was in that memorable moment when it became a part of my being through the superb sensitiveness of its chronicler, as did the modeling of her face, the mat-like skin, the rich fragrance of her sophistication.

And the smell of the furnaces in "The Three Black Pennys" is as unforgettable as the look on the eldest Penny's face. Other writers describe what they saw. Joseph Hergesheimer felt, with every one of his five senses, and he made his readers as five-sense-conscious as himself. It was his great contribution to American literature.

In those days he also had a gift for the creation of character. The Pennys are rounded human beings. I don't know what has happened to him with the passage of the years—too great a success, perhaps—but he has so slowly and so imperceptibly lost his genius for character [as a beautiful woman ages almost imperceptibly] that this reviewer has never been willing to acknowledge the loss. That loss, however, is so obvious in "Tropical Winter" that it is no longer possible to deny it. And with that loss, there is also apparent a change in the author's skill with the senses. He has become, in "Tropical Winter" merely a skilled observer of the senses, not their prophet.

The ten stories in this volume are full of sensuous details about the luxury of life in Palm Beach, pounds of fresh caviar fill its pages, servants clutter them [with detailed descriptioning of their liveries], gin and tonic and champagne cocktails rain upon them, little intimate dinners for sixty course through them, and when page 226 ends the book the reader can't remember any single individual in them, merely a composite photograph of wealthy rotters male, female, old and young.

Perhaps, as one of the characters in the last story says, "There is no Palm Beach. It had gone, vanished with a vanishing people, a society that was lost." Mr. Hergesheimer's record is that of an archaeologist, presenting facts about the flora and the fauna which research has brought forth, but without recreating one single human being of that vanished world.

Of course, the stories are skillful. Their author is a trained and brilliant craftsman. They have all of the trappings of literature without its life.

On the other hand, the stories in "Hot Places," which are done by not nearly so skillful a hand, have a vitality and a reality about them which the tales in "Tropical Winter" lack. There are three stories in the volume, one about a marathon dancer in Antofagasta, Chile, who is dancing for the life of her child, another about the struggle between two native Brazil girls for the love of a young Frenchman, and the third, a short novel about a fantastic household in Ecuador.

The author says in his postscript, "three landscapes such as seemed to me typical of the countries . . . and I let those landscapes people themselves in my mind and those people form themselves into this book." With obvious success the author has done just that, and the result is a vitalizing of background through the vividness of the characters which have their being against it. "Hot Places" is a markedly successful marriage between character delineation and spiritual and physical landscape.

"Sardinian Sideshow" is fact, not fiction, the record of the long months which the author spent during the war interned as an enemy alien in Sardinia. It has real charm, both in point of view and in the author's recounting of the attractions of the fascinating sideshow of which she was at the same time a part and an observer. The war was remote from them, but fleas were very near and the hardships which they suffered are recorded with the eye-twinkle and the frank honesty that puts an exclamation point after the very word "Life!" "Sardinian Sideshow" has been compared, even by Dr. Munthe's passionate admirers, favorably and joyously with "The Story of San Michele."

Happy Concert Is Presented by Ukrainians

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Gay with all the hues of the rainbow, gay also in the tones of their voices, the Ukrainian chorus of Chicago sang at the Studebaker theater yesterday afternoon under the direction of George Benetzky.

This is a comparatively new organization, but in a few seasons it has become one of the striking singing groups of the community. Its membership numbers about forty, and these forty have merged themselves into a highly expert ensemble. From Russia on the one side and the United States on the other they have an enormous field of attractive songs from which to draw, they are quite evidently docile under the discipline of learning them, and when they appear in public they costume themselves in the holiday garb of the Ukraine and sing as though every song were a holiday joy.

Sometimes humming an accompaniment for a solo melody, sometimes bursting out into sustained phrases, sometimes neatly and deftly projecting a rapid fire series of syllables that fairly dance in their exuberance, these Ukrainians are a cheery group. Their program was divided into three sections, a group of Ukrainian songs, followed by another group of Tschaikowsky's liturgical compositions, in commemoration of his death forty years ago, and finally a group of songs in English, with special emphasis on "Listen to the Lambs," Annie Laurie," and "Deep River." It was one of the enjoyable events of the season.

Herman Felber Jr., first violin of the Chicago String quartet, told the audience in the Chicago Woman's club theater that they need not treat the pieces from Alfredo Casella's "1920" too seriously. He was quite right, and the patrons did not. A "Valse Ridicule" and a "Fox Trot" disclosed themselves as a set of rather absurd tunes played in several keys simultaneously, an entirely blameless occupation for a composer if he thinks he can get anywhere by adopting it.

At least they gave a little contrasting color to the rest of the program, which began with the Schumann quartet in F, opus 41, and ended, calling upon the assistance of Sheppard Lehnhoff, viola, with the Brahms quintet, also in F, opus 88. It is by such programs that the organization gives a view of the chamber music field in both its classical and contemporary aspects.

In the evening's music there was a concert by the Joseffer String quartet, assisted by Berenice Taylor, soprano; Max Bendix, viola, and Alexander Joseffer, pianist, in the Cordon club; and a joint recital by Mary Krakowski, soprano, and Karl McGuire pianist, under the auspices of the American artists' department of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs at the Stevens hotel.

Taffeta Plays a Big Role in Fashion News

New Materials Shown in Chicago Shops.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Taffeta speaks most authoritively this season . . . you will see typical Sunday-go-to-meeting dresses in swanky black, trimmed with plaited frills, to say nothing of others with very feminine accents of lace trimmed cuffs and collars of spanking white organdy, net, tucked and cross barred lawn and cobwebby lace. For the first time in years we will rustle when we move and what a grand sensation this is going to be.

Plaid taffetas are as charming as they are colorful and smart . . . you can fashion entire costumes of these multi-colored plaids or you can control the deluge of color with a blouse or two, and with more restraint, merely use this new silk as a yoke or cuffs or collar or just perky wisps of trimming.

Other new materials that are being introduced are the newest of wool "sheers" . . . bolts and bolts of interesting new gray shades have at last arrived. You have been hearing a lot about costumes composed of two or even three shades of gray and now you can shop with all the appreciation possible, for these new fabrics are something to really rave about.

Look for the new slate grays, a gray with enough blue in it to make it especially effective with deep blue accessories. Another gray has quantities of yellow hiding in the shadowed folds of the thin wool and yet another has a mist of mauve overclouding the smoke tone.

You will find lots of the fashionable pumice gray tones, and even more of the warm silvery grays that can be used effectively as the lightest contrasts for your three color symphony. Good dark, smoky grays are abundantly available for outside use, for the three-quarter length swagger coats that complete the three piece gray ensemble.

Some of the biggest and brightest of plaids have been splashed over some new thin sheer wools . . . gorgeous concoctions for midseason dresses to wear right away. You'll get a big kick out of these very gawdy fabrics . . . they certainly scream in a breezy fashion and will do cheering things for a dull and drab winter wardrobe. The royal blue and gold plaid, or the persuasive green mixture, and, of course, the eye-filling scarlet, black and white soft woolens are spectacularly perfect.

Also, again you listen to the lure of taffeta . . . all these new sheer wools are very transparent, and this is your chance to revive the taffeta silk slip, the snooty 1933 flapper descendant of the old grand dame, the taffeta silk underskirt. Make the slips with bias seams, so that they will cling as smoothly as anything you have ever worn, and achieve that super-smooth and slim silhouette that you have practically starved to maintain.

Prowling around the fabric sections you will blink your eyes over the new arrays of crinkled white organdies . . . and how these hitherto smooth materials have been crinkled and wrinkled to please the designers. You have shopped for crinkled silks, velvets and wools, and now you can shop merrily for crinkled cottons, the most exciting of these being the very new white and colored organdies.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

KELLEY HAS AN OFF DAY.

"Buzz" Carnahan lifted his derby, frowned, scratched the expanse of pink scalp on top of his head, took a drag on his stogie and swore softly. Softly because he didn't want to be discovered before he had a chance of completely searching Belle's room.

Where had that wench hidden those papers? You'd think in a small room like this he would have found them right off the bat! D—— that broad! Was the chief right, after all? Perhaps she did pass them on. No. Not that gal. She wouldn't trust the Almighty! She played a lone hand.

His reflections were interrupted by voices outside the door. Cautiously he crept to the window, raised it noiselessly, slipped to the fire escape, closed it after him and disappeared just as Inspector Kelley and Prof. Fordney entered the room.

"That dame was crazy," Kelley remarked disgustedly after looking around. "The place is as dead as a tomb. Not a sign of any one's having been here. Who'd want this junk, anyway? Couldn't get a ten spot for the works."

Both men walked over to the window and looked out just as a man jumped from the bottom rung of the fire escape.

"If your mind wasn't so filled with other things," chaffed the professor, "you'd know that we just missed our man."

"What, that guy? Now, Joseph," responded Kelley in a mocking voice, "don't try any of your classroom stunts on me! You haven't a chance of proving he came from here."

"Well, I still contend that SOME ONE left here a few minutes ago," retorted Fordney.

Drama League to Give Dinner Dance Tonight

Sponsors of Party Expect Large Crowd.

BY JUDITH CASS.

ALTHOUGH invitations for the Drama league's buffet dinner dance to be given this evening at the Drake hotel were sent out only a week ago, the sponsors of the party are expecting it to be a large and successful one. Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock and at 8 o'clock there will be a cabaret show in which Ethel Dixon, Gail Wood, and Julio Diego will perform.

Mr. Wood is a pianist who has a great bag of tricks, such as imitating a dozen instruments on the piano and playing an operatic piece with one hand while pounding out a jazz number with the other. Mr. Diego is a Spanish portrait caricaturist. Miss Dixon is so well known and liked for her dancing and singing that she needs no introduction.

Among those who have made reservations are Emil Wetten, Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. R. Townsend McKeever, Mr. and Mrs. George Lytton, Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Boysen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stephen Bailey, and Dr. and Mrs. Otho F. Ball. While hundreds of invitations have been mailed out, the affair is open to the public and it will not be necessary to have either invitations or reservations.

Junior League Tea Today.

The board of managers of the Junior league is giving a tea this afternoon in the league headquarters at 619 North Michigan avenue for members of the committees working on the publicity and other preparations for the Enchanted Island of A Century of Progress.

Miss Gloria Chandler and Miss Helen Tieken will be the official delegates of the Chicago Junior league to the National Children's Theater conference, to open on Tuesday of next week in Cleveland.

Miss Chandler has been acting as chairman of the Chicago league's Children's theater this winter since the resignation of Miss Tieken. Miss Dorothy Schmit, who is in charge of the league's plays to be given on The Enchanted Island at A Century of Progress, will go to the conference as a national delegate, and Miss Helen

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess is marooned in a catboat on Peconic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville. His companion, Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," rows to town for a carpenter. A girl in a canoe invites Bart over to her family's island, but her small brother says their mother would have a fit. Bart senses a family secret. Ingy sends help and taxies home. Bart learns that the Bayleys have lived on the island fifteen years, but don't mix. The father travels. He invites the girl, Alice, to visit him in Wyattville. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. Bart finds himself the head of the house, with his invalid mother to care for. Shortly after the funeral Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcée, calls on Bart.

INSTALLMENT VII.

A SINISTER MESSAGE.

"You're such a sweet child." Lora's gloved hand was like a kitten's paw on Bart's arm. "Your father was that way. I mean, he stayed so jolly and so young."

"Yes, he did."

"I mean, he never seemed to let things spoil him. The way some business men get one of those complexes where they play around a lot."

"Play around?"

"O." Bart tilted forward a little nervously.

"You're a lot like your father, Bart Burgess."

"I hope so."

She got up, pretending to hunt for an ash tray, and stood very close to him. How small she was, smiling up.

"I wonder——" She stopped, bit her lip.

"I almost forgot this," he smiled hastily, then rushed out toward the waiting car.

"What is it that makes you Burgess men like that? Is it pure goodness—O, horrors! Or are you just born indifferent?"

He laughed away his embarrassment. "Lady, lady, didn't you say I was only an infant? Give me a chance to grow up."

Her eyes said, I'm giving you that chance. Now he could read them plainly. But were the Burgess men indifferent? Lora Sackett was laughing with her mouth open, showing gleaming teeth, a little red tongue between the false red of her lips.

She stood there offering herself, lightly, jestingly. But his hands stayed in his pockets.

"Say, what's going on in the world you just handed me?"

"O, everything. The Wyattville hunt was out today. Old Mr. Prewitt fell off his horse as usual. And why do you think I came rushing back from Philadelphia?"

"You just told me why. But why did you?"

"A boy friend wired me not to miss the Sadlers' dance."

"Ingy Warren."

"O, my gosh!"

"What did you say that for?"

"I didn't."

"Liar. I just heard you."

"Well, if I were a girl, pretty as you are——"

"Thank you, sir."

"——pretty as you are, and Ingy Warren wired me to come to Wyattville, I'd grab my toothbrush and jump the first air mail for San Francisco. That's what I think of Ingy Warren."

"Nothing else?" she asked archly.

"He's a bum, and a poison bum, if anybody should ask you. You just called yourself experienced. Well, turn a little of that on Ingy Warren. Even the taxi drivers can tell you."

"O, they know ev-erything!" In a baby voice. "Bart Burgess, are you getting swelled up, now that you're——"

"Bunk!" he snorted.

"You're wonderful when you're strong like that! A woman loves to be mastered." This was play, but her round eyes were trying to win him. "I hope it isn't going to make you serious. I mean, all that money."

Then the doorbell rang and Ella announced, "Mr. Warren."

Ingalls Frederick Warren, when he appeared, was quite different from the damp person who had clung to a stranded catboat. His polo coat was slightly bombastic and something in his gesture casting it aside announced, "I'm a very rich young man." He was actually 28, yet his air of worldly wisdom made him appear older just then—his innocent glance seemed to be asking, "What one of you is in love?" And "how could I amuse myself with that?" Apparently the little shipwreck was hardly worth remembering. His aside to Lora was agreeably sly:

"You certainly missed a party last night."

"You're priceless!" whinneyed Lora, now busily at work on Ingy. "O, Bart, I'm nearly dead. Won't my darling give us a cocktail?" In spite of that, Bart waited a moment for Ingy to decline.

"It's what the doctor ordered," said Ingy.

Therefore Bart shook up a cocktail and with every shake wondered why it's always on the cards, this being nice to people you'd rather see in jail. After that there was a great deal of talk of less importance than so much blowing of steam. Presently Ingy took Lora away in his fantastically streamlined car and left Bart thinking—rather nice girl. But I wonder what she really wants? Or if she knows?

Bart's dinner with Mr. McClellan had been a monologue of praise for the late Trevor Burgess, and because the ear of affection finally tires of eulogies the young man was growing impatient for the useful little man to go home. Mr. McClellan had told how old Trev had been known as the Judge at Yale. The sort you'd trust your sister to. "But I always wondered why he never went into public life. You have to respect the best citizen in the community, also to be head of the Lanchester Life Insurance company isn't to be despised. But the country needs men like him. Do you know he refused a United States senatorship in 1920?"

Bart remembered something like that; his mother had complained weakly, ineffectually.

"It wasn't his health," insisted the lawyer. "He wouldn't let insurance doctors examine him. Proud of his strength. Maybe it was his devotion to the family that kept him back. Are you going in for a public career?"

"I don't think so, sir. I belong in dad's business."

"Well, maybe you're right. The law's a dull business unless you like it. No coffee, thank you." Mr. McClellan had to catch the next train, but in some embarrassment he lingered in the hall, fishing into his brief case until he brought out a long envelope with the familiar letterhead of the Lanchester Life. "I almost forgot this," he smiled hastily, then rushed out toward the waiting car. The envelope, somehow sinister, lay in Bart's hand.

Miss Meade will be glad to answer questions pertaining to cookery and the kitchen. For personal reply, send stamped, addressed envelope.

BY MARY MEADE.

Pale, wan foods make mighty discouraging eating. Ten years ago if I had said that to Mrs. American Housewife she would have come back with the retort, "Food's food. All you have to do is to make it taste good."

But men and women who know a great deal about foods and appetites and people's dispositions have been making some odd tests in the last ten years. They've been feeding unsuspecting diners color combinations!

Then the experimenters started to survey with results surprising to themselves. Probably not one person out of fifty gave a single conscious thought to the color scheme of his dinner, yet the more harmonious the foods were in color, and the clearer and fresher the colors themselves, the bigger waxed the appetites! It seemed even to affect dispositions, and it already has been discovered that the happier we are when eating, the better we digest our food and the more value we get out of it.

Today all that has got beyond the laboratory stage. We're color scheming in our own kitchen—and finding that it works. Menus now are planned not only from the angles of expense and proper food value but also from that of happy color combination in main dishes, vegetables, salads, drinks, desserts, and, of course, in the linen, china, and table centerpiece.

We're learning the tricks of keeping fresh color in cooked vegetables and, in many cases, where natural color does not come to help us we are adding sparkle with dashes and drops of pure food coloring judiciously applied. An assortment of colors kept handy will make cooking lots more fun. Remember just one thing—keep your colors pleasant and becoming. Loud noises are out of place at the table.

Frostings are a natural stopping place for color tints. While you mix the icing, stir in the dissolved color until the desired tint has been reached. Cakes may be iced with more than one color. A chocolate frosting on top with a goldy-orange one smoothed around the sides of the cake and smiling from between layers has a color charm all its own.

Or the cake itself may be subtly tinted by adding dissolved pure food colors to the batter before putting in the pan. A simple three layer cake—one layer lemon-yellow and the other two of a richer orange, put together with chocolate filling and covered with lemon colored and flavored frosting dashed with chocolate sprinkles, will make a grand slam at the most sophisticated bridge luncheon.

Then in these days of mechanical refrigerators ice cubes give us another chance to do a bit of coloring. Stir into the water to be frozen enough of the tint to color it lightly. Pale green, yellow, or rose are some of the possibilities. Pour into the ice tray and freeze. When company looms try adding pieces of fruit or berries to the water to be frozen. Or mint leaves with green tints in cubes for iced tea will appeal on a suddenly springlike mid-winter day. Flavoring may be added, too, the variety depending upon the beverage to be chilled.

Salads also need a bit of colorful help. Pears, peaches, pineapple, fancy cut hard cooked white of eggs, or boiled potatoes, and other salad ingredients take on delightful new aspects by a dipping or a bit of standing in the dissolved tint. Let fruits stand awhile in their own tinted juices. Rosy pears add tantalizing color when used to outline a creamy cheese luncheon ring filled with crisp watercress. Pineapple sections take on a tempting green color and make delectable salads with mint as the garnish. Or if pale foods are left pale, mayonnaise may be tinted for still more variety.

Also tint a cream cheese for a sandwich now and then. Give an extra hit of color to ice creams and sherbets. Dilute a food tint and work it into shredded cocoanut as a topping for cakes, salads, or puddings.

And lastly don't forget the appeal of pastel colors in puffs of whipped cream—all of one color or different sections colored harmonious tints and blended. O-so-lazily, together with the passing of a fork through their varied shades. That, by the way, is a rainbow topping that will companify even the simplest one-egg cake.

STOLBERG, Germany, Jan. 22.—With all the pomp of old princely weddings, Prince Wolff-Heinrich Stolberg, one time fiancé of Juliana, heiress to the throne of Holland, today married Irma Erfert, daughter of a minor savings bank official.

The castle was thrown open for the day, all servants wearing old costumes trimmed with costly furs. The population paid homage to the young couple in a picturesque torchlight procession last night and the prince had wine and beer served his faithful followers.

All Stolberg citizens who are unemployed or listed as penniless received a small cash present from the prince to make a merry day of his wedding.

The pattern, No. 3333, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material with ¼ yard of 39 inch contrasting and ⅝ yard of 35 inch lining.

Good Morning!

More soviet propaganda—slow moving, laboriously directed, but characterized by an absorbed earnestness on the part of the players that compels your concentrated attention.

In "Old and New," the great Russian director Serges Eisenstein, painted an unforgettable canvas of the tractor's advent into the soviet's scheme of things. In "Men and Jobs," A. Macheret, author of the scenario as well as its director, enlarges on the steam driven crane and accords the friendliest of tribute to American efficiency which he shows as the driving wheel of Russian enthusiasm. The piece is unique in that it is not the usual bitter tirade against capitalism.

You see a shrewd, good humored American engineer, assigned to a Russian project, shake his head over the bungling manner in which untrained peasants manipulate the fine machinery imported to simplify their industrializations.

"You do in nine minutes what should be accomplished in three. You don't know how to work," he tells the enthusiasts. And proves his statements.

This goes down hard with Zahharov, section foreman and head of the "shock brigade" which has been accorded prizes because of its speed and spirit. He goes berserker for a night. Then he comes to his senses. It is so. It is so! It has been proven! The Russians DON'T know how to work! All right. They will learn. Twenty men—he among them—shall become expert machinists——

They do. The finale shows them as having surpassed the American technique they have struggled to acquire.

"How did we do it? Enthusiasm!" says Zakharov—no longer the dirty, mulish tyro, but an up and coming, shaven and cleanly Russian expert. Good scene—the one in which he makes the speech, and an excellent characterization throughout by Mr. Oklopkov as Zakharov!

V. Stanitzyn also gives an outstanding portrayal as the American.

"Men and Jobs" is, of course, a presentation of soviet activities from the Russian viewpoint. Dialogue is Russian with the exception of some of Cline's lines. Superimposed—and very halting titles, make most of the episodes comprehendable, and a musical score lightens matters a bit.

See you tomorrow!

Another Marx Brother May Enter Movies

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Just as though the Paramount studio were not already busy, with such a combination of complications as [1] the depression; [2] two flop pictures being made at the same time—Buster Crabbe's and Randolph Scott's; [3] Marlene Dietrich having her photo snapped in a man's tuxedo at the coast "Sign of the Cross" premiere; [4] Maurice Chevalier helping test 175 one year old babies in quest of a new Davey Lee; now comes [5] another major complication with a fifth Marx brother suggested to join that troupe of chandelier swingers.

It's not all settled yet, but the fifth brother—Milton [he will be named Gummo in the act]—is said to be getting his New York suit business in shape, in case it is decided to have him move west and become a comedian instead of a business man.

Gummo and Groucho used to be the entire "Marx Brothers" act in vaudeville when their style of clowning wasn't as remunerative as the movies have since made it. That was before the war when Harpo, the oldest brother, still was a bell hop and Chico an itinerant piano player. Gummo decided to quit the show business for something more profitable—like the suit business, after the war, and the kid brother, Zeppo, took his place. Now the suit business doesn't compare with the show business for profit, so it will probably be five brothers you will be trying to keep track of in their next frenzied film.

O, yes, Gummo gets his name from chewing gum, they say. He's the fourth brother in point of age; they come in this order of seniority—Harpo, Chico, Groucho, Gummo, and Zeppo.

Man Befriends Widow Then She Deserts Him

Takes Most of Furniture with Her.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

To go back a few years the woman was left a widow with four children on her hands. With no means of support, there was the threat of having the children taken from her and put in an orphan asylum.

The man was a painter, a bachelor. He gave the woman a job cleaning his bachelor quarters for him. She cried about the children. He felt sorry for her, married her, and took over the responsibility of the youngsters. It was hard sledding at times, but the man managed to see the youngsters through school. The two older boys got work early. They lived at home and contributed as best they could to the household expenses.

Then unemployment became not an occasional thing, as before, with the house painter, but a steady trial. He tried other kind of work, but a few days out of the month was the best he could get. The boys were forced to meet the rent. Then no days' work could be found—and the boys and mother decided to move out and on their own, leaving the man in possession of as little furniture as could be spared, and mighty little was spared—a stove, a bed, and a few cooking utensils.

"Pretty tough," says the man, "I kept them together when they needed a friend! The money I spent would have provided me a neat rainy day nest egg. Is there any reparation I can ask or get?"

It's doubtful if reparation can be got. Hearing one side of the case only, we're not in a position to pass judgment on the woman, though our inclination is to set her down as a hard boiled individual. We do not know how, in her years of married life, she was treated. The rent may have been paid and the food provided—but that is not all that binds a woman to a man. But there are creatures in this world who seem to be wholly without the milk of human kindness. Greedy women; selfish, mean, hard hearted, and if one's lot happens to have been thrown with such there's little more than a heartache to be got from their association.

Joint Show of Art Works Attracts Many Visitors

Art works and antiques, both native and foreign, attracted a large crowd yesterday at the opening of a joint exhibit at the Drake hotel by five Chicago companies. Included in the collections are rare pieces of jewelry, paintings, articles of furniture, rugs, and ceramics. The exhibit, sponsored by Yamanaka & Co., Blum's, Inc., the O'Brien galleries, David Zork & Co., and Nahigian brothers, will continue for five days.

Auxiliary of Fair.

The Ladies' auxiliary of the German group of A Century of Progress will meet this afternoon at the Hotel Bismarck for an illustrated lecture on the exposition by Miss Helen M. Bennett.

First of Season

The first debutante of the season to have her engagement to wed announced is Miss Lady Eleanor Litsinger, second daughter of the Edward R. Litsingers. Miss Litsinger is the fiancé of Eugene Cary, only son of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Cary of the Drake hotel. Owing to the youth of the couple [Eleanor is just 18 and the young man is very young, too], no date for the wedding is set.

Three Causes for Unsightly, Tiny Wrinkles

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The way to approach any remedy is to first know the cause of the trouble. Take wrinkles, as an example!

Do you know what causes them? Do you know there are three outstanding reasons for their formation? First, that there are certain glands of the skin that produce an oil intended by nature to protect and preserve the skin against wrinkle formation. That if the body does not supply enough oil, the skin will be affected and tiny wrinkles will begin to form, later to develop into deeper groves.

Secondly, there is beneath the normal, young skin a padding of fatty tissue. This and the muscle fibers in the skin give the face of youth its contour and firmness. The muscle fibers in youth are elastic and firm. As one grows older they lose some of their elasticity and the fat padding is somewhat depleted so that the skin muscles are not able to take up the slack.

Thirdly, the emotions to which the face is subjected offer another reason for wrinkle formation. Scowling, frowning, the hard set mouth and jaw, queer facial mannerisms—all these contract the muscles until, after a time, lines are formed and become deeper and deeper. The remedy here is obvious.

The loss of the fat padding so necessary to skin smoothness is due frequently to illness; again, to strenuous dieting, in which all fatty substances are excluded from the diet. This same strenuous dieting and anti-fat foodstuffs contribute to the loss of oil which preserves the skin. It's better for youth's sake to have a few pounds on the body than to rob the facial skin of its fatty tissue. The oil formation is drawn largely from the consumption of fat property foods.

In correcting wrinkles, so many, many women put all their hopes in a magic skin food, massage aid, and lotions of one sort and another. Let these external aids be twenty-five per cent of the remedy, seventy-five per cent being internal.

Operetta Company Offers Second Production.

"THE SONG OF THE FLAME."

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The second production of the Chicago Operetta company in its ambitious and well managed sessions at the Civic Opera house is "The Song of the Flame," a piece of lyric romance modern enough to carry the name of George Gershwin on its program as one of its pair of composers. It deals with the early phases of the Russian revolution, which was by no means a comic opera affair; and so, although it tells about the love of a prince for a peasant girl and indulges freely in Tartar dances and vodka parties, it has a certain austerity of tone which blends with its grand opera environment. The opera-in-English zealots may attend these performances without fear of compromising their artistic ideals.

The first staging of "The Song of the Flame" dates back only as far as 1925, a fact which will indicate that this bill is not an old war horse of the repertory companies. In the scoring of its theme song—a stirring and ominous chant expressing the revolutionary spirit—there are suggestions of the Gershwin of today. Here is a notable song in the modern manner, and the Chicago Operetta company's fine orchestra and promising chorus does it full justice, while Charlotte Lansing, leading the number as Russia's Joan of Arc, proves herself a prima donna who can handle the heavy assignments as well as the light. It becomes evident, in fact, that Miss Lansing is a singing girl of decided talent and that her engagement for this season of revivals was a happy stroke of management.

To Greek Evans, the admirable baritone of the company, falls a character which might be called a villain if the story wasn't Russian. He is a firebrand of the proletariat who stirs up trouble in the name of patriotism, woos the singing Joan of Arc relentlessly, and tries to get away with all the jewels in sight, when the looting begins, for his own private uses. This menacing fellow comes to a bad end, but not before Mr. Evans ingratiates himself with his audience with some vibrant and impressive singing.

James Liddy appears as a pleasant young nobleman who courts the lowborn heroine with honorable intent and carves his initials with hers on a beech tree, following the Cossack custom of bethrothal. That incident gives the cue to the secondary song hit of the piece—a duet for Miss Lansing and Mr. Liddy that has passed into the catalogue for radio programs.

John Dunsmure, the basso, is cast as a comic moujik, and shares a frolicking dance number called "Great Big Bear" with Marion Palmer, a new member of the company who has all the qualifications for brisk and bouncing soubrette behavior. Lorna Doone Jackson, looking decidedly Muscovite, appears as a Tartar dancer who carries two carving knives in her belt and wants to use them.

The stage direction achieves some striking pictorial effects, especially in the prologue, which is an affair of sinister shadows, and threatening hands lifted in grim protest—an effect out of the text books of Max Reinhardt. The second act begins in an orgy and ends in a massacre, with vivid theatrical effect.

Next week's bill will be "The Desert Song," with Miss Lansing in her original role and Mr. Evans as the red rider of the Sahara.

"Face the Music" will end its stay at the Grand Opera house next Saturday night, and the company will return to New York for a second engagement. It will be followed by a revival of the popular operetta, "Blossom Time," beginning Jan. 29. The cast will contain J. Charles Gilbert in the rôle of Franz Schubert; Allan Jones, Gertrude Lang, George Hassell, John Goldsworthy, Manila Powers, Lorraine Weimar, Charles Chesney, Joseph Toner, Robert Horn, and Berta Donn. This engagement is limited to two weeks.

Results of Child Welfare Conference Given in Leaflets

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

At the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection many valuable and interesting things transpired. To attend it and take part in it was a thrilling experience. But while it closed on a note of consecration it also closed on a note of warning.

That warning was to the effect that the findings of this conference must not go the way of so many reports and findings. That is, they must not be the end of something, but a beginning. They must not be buried in books and gather dust on shelves.

It was decided that leaflet form would be a desirable and informal way to pass on some of the conclusions of the conference. Three sets of leaflets were prepared based on the reports of the White House conference. The writer of these is Marion L. Faegre, who is assistant professor of parent education of the Institute of Child Welfare in the University of Minnesota. A description of these will appear later this week.

Church Music Leaders Back Temple Plans

The guilds of choir directors and organists, church musicians, and parent-teacher music groups to the number of twenty-seven hundred added the support of their organizations to the campaign of the Chicago Friends of Music yesterday. The Friends of Music are engaged in a drive to erect a $100,000 permanent Temple of Music for A Century of Progress exposition.

The occasion of the indorsement was a festival service in the University of Chicago chapel in which the Choral Directors' Guild of Chicago, the American Guild of Organists, the National Association of Organists, the Mothers' Chorus [parent-teacher group], and the Chicago club of women organists participated.

Dr. Allan Albert, speaking for A Century of Progress, outlined plans for music at the Fair, and Dr. Frederick Stock told this gathering of professional and amateur musicians what the Chicago Friends of Music planned as their contribution to music not only at A Century of Progress, but in future years. Dr. Stock told his audience how the Temple of Music would be a permanent building to remain at the conclusion of the exposition as a home for summer concerts where choirs, singing societies, national groups, and school groups, as well as professional musicians, would find a platform on which to display their work.

Choirs participating were those of the University of Chicago, the Bethlehem Evangelical church and the Ebenezer Lutheran church, and a massed chorus of twenty-seven hundred voices from the organizations present. Three choruses from Handel's "Messiah" were sung by this group. Organ soloists were Lily Wadhams Hallam, Edward Eigenshank, and Edwin Stanley Seder.

Guards of '93 Fair Will Lunch with Those of New

The 40 years which separate the Chicago of today and the city which was host at the World's Columbian exposition of 1893 will be bridged Thursday in the trustees' rooms of the Century of Progress exposition. Guards of the 1893 and 1933 expositions will lunch together. A month ago officers of the exposition began a search for survivors of the 700 young guards of the 1893 fair.

NAVY IS IN FAVOR OF WITHDRAWING FAR EAST BASES

Would Make Hawaii Only Outpost.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Far reaching changes in American naval and military policies in the far east loom on the near horizon as the direct result of enactment of the bill granting independence to the Philippine islands after a ten year preparatory period.

Should the islands take advantage of the bill completely to sever the close relations they have had with the United States since the Spanish-American war days, some of the highest ranking army and navy officers plan to urge complete withdrawal of all naval and military forces from the islands and from China proper.

Favor General Withdrawal.

Inquiry today disclosed that while a difference of opinion exists as to the proper course to be taken by the United States in event the island are cast loose, a majority of military and naval strategists take the position that it would be folly for this country to continue to maintain naval and military forces in Asiatic waters under present treaty handicaps without some form of control over the Philippines.

Adoption of such a course would mean that the navy would give up its bases at Cavite and Olongapo, recall the marines now stationed at Peiping, and make the Hawaiian islands its farthest outlying base in the far east. Such gunboats and destroyers as were retained for the protection of American missionaries and commerce would be based in Chinese ports.

Take Troops from China.

The war department also would withdraw, when practicable, its garrison from Tientsin, where American army troops have been maintained since the Boxer troubles. About 400 American troops are maintained there at present, although several hundred soldiers have been withdrawn in recent years.

Were it not for the fact that Japanese Manchurian troops are standing at the gates of Peiping and Tientsin, it is extremely probable that the United States would delay no longer in removing her soldiers and marines from those two northern Chinese cities. A move to remove these forces was initiated three years ago, but thwarted by the state department.

Now the Hoover administration would feel much easier if these troops were no longer there. Decision has been reached, however, not to remove these troops for the time being, as their withdrawal would certainly be misconstrued in Japan.

Would Leave Japan in Control.

Should this country adopt a policy of complete withdrawal of American naval and military forces, Japan would be left with virtually unchallenged control of far eastern waters. The United States, which made its bid in the late "90's" for a foothold in the Asiatic from which she could maintain her open door policies, afford protection for American citizens, and maintain some sort of naval equilibrium in that area, would simply step out and remove her base of operations back to Hawaii, 4,000 miles closer to the continental United States.

It is true that under the terms of the Philippine bill the United States reserves the right to take over land or property for naval and military bases and use them permanently for this purpose. The arguments advanced against following such a policy are numerous.

In the first place, strategists assert loss of American control of the islands plus the handicaps placed on strengthening of fortifications by the Washington treaties and the fact that Japan has built up her naval strength rapidly while this country has allowed hers to deteriorate, would make it extremely unwise for this country to attempt to maintain bases in that area.

Only Inviting Trouble.

Should the Washington treaty be changed to permit huge expenditures on base development and should such a policy win favor in this country, the armed forces probably would favor sticking it out. But under present limitations, leading army and navy strategists openly assert it would only be inviting trouble if it attempted to retain its bases after the Philippines had become independent. Their view is that this country should get out completely when the islands are freed in fact.

Opposition to any move to remove the naval and military arms would most likely arouse opposition from the state department because its task is that of maintaining our foreign policies which include a program in the far east extremely repugnant at this time to Japan. The United States is traditionally bound to uphold the open door policy. It also has asserted repeatedly its stand against recognition of territorial acquisitions through force of arms.

Blame State Department.

It was the state department, however, which paved the way for American naval and military impotency in the far Pacific by negotiating the Washington treaties providing for a status quo in naval fortifications in that area. Naval officials now admit that without stronger fortifications, a move forbidden by treaty, this country could not long hang on to her bases if attacked by a determined and well equipped power. The chances of defending these bases would be weakened, they argue, if this country had no control over the Philippines.

Those naval officers who oppose withdrawal from the Philippine area assert that to abandon our bases would be to lose face with the oriental world. They also contend that even though these fortifications under present conditions could not long withstand a determined attack, they would serve the useful purpose of engaging the attention of the enemy pending the arrival of stronger American forces.

The ultimate decision by the United States in regard to the maintenance of troops in the Philippines will have a very important effect on the military characteristics of ships to be constructed for this country's use in the future. With our outlying base at Hawaii the United States would be 4,700 miles from the Philippine area.

Without a base there, the ships operating in that area would have to have long streaming radius and powerful guns if they were to go more than 4,000 miles to the trouble area, fight a while and still retain fuel to get back home.

Until a base was seized in the Asiatic, the American fleet would have to operate from Hawaii. This would mean that the general board of the navy would put a still greater premium on the construction of 10,000 ton long range 8-inch gun cruisers and big battleships.

MEMBER OF OLD BIRGER GANG ON TRIAL AS ROBBER

Greenville, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Three members of the old Birger gang that terrorized southern Illinois several years ago, Art Newman, Freddie Wooten, and Connie Ritter, were on their way here under heavy guard today from state prisons. They will be witnesses at the trial, opening tomorrow, of L. R. Green, alias Oklahoma Slim Maguire, charged with participation in the robbery in 1926 of the Bond County bank at Pocahontas, Ill.

Another witness, Mrs. Josephine Wooten, wife of Freddie, will be brought here from the woman's reformatory at Dwight. She and her husband and Ritter will testify for the defense.

Authorities have learned that intense hatred exists between the Newmans and the Wootens and special precautions will be taken to keep them apart at the trial in the Bond county Circuit court and to keep the courtroom clear of gangsters.

TONIGHT'S SCHEDULE.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Michigan-Minnesota game at Minneapolis tonight, the only basketball engagement in the conference, winds up the first semester play. There are occasional nonleague games for those universities where examinations do not conflict with practice, but Big Ten competition is at an end for nearly two weeks.

Ohio State, which so far has played only three games and these at home, leads the championship race. Northwestern, winner four times in five starts, is second, but the Wildcats may be joined tonight by Michigan, now tied with Wisconsin for third place, if the Wolverines can whip Minnesota.

The showing of the Gophers has been disappointing, but it must be added that its three games have been against two of the strongest offensive teams in the Big Ten. Purdue opened at Minneapolis by licking the Gophers, 42 to 32. A week later, at Columbus, Ohio State won from Minnesota, 43 to 28, and last Monday night Purdue repeated its first triumph, 40 to 16.

Gophers in Hard Luck.

Apparently the Minnesota quintet, which began with high hope of a title, is demoralized. Virgil Licht, its star guard, has been suspended for failure to observe training rules.

Michigan's position in the race rests on its defeat of Iowa and division of the Illinois series. Saturday night the Wolverines disposed of Chicago, 36 to 18. The Maroons were without the services of Chiz Evans after the first three minutes of play. Evans is by far the most effective scorer on the squad.

Wisconsin's only defeat thus far was at the hands of Northwestern a week ago, 40 to 22. Its victories were scored against Chicago, 26 to 17; Iowa, 21 to 19, and Indiana, 38 to 37. In the latter game, according to Coach Everett Dean of Indiana, who saw the Illinois-Northwestern game Saturday night, Wisconsin had speed and aggressiveness, both of which were lacking in its play against the Wildcats.

Ohio May Fall.

Northwestern and the other runners-up are concerned with Ohio State's undefeated progress. The Buckeyes undoubtedly are due to take a licking somewhere along the line, for it is the history of conference basketball that the champion seldom wins all its 12 games. Purdue, champion last year, lost to Illinois, while Northwestern, 1931 titleholder, also lost to Illinois while sweeping through the remainder of its schedule.

Feb. 6—Northwestern at Indiana.
Feb. 13—Minnesota at Northwestern.
Feb. 18—Chicago at Northwestern.
Feb. 20—Northwestern at Purdue.
Feb. 25—Northwestern at Wisconsin.
Feb. 27—Indiana at Northwestern.
March 4—Northwestern at Minnesota.

The schedule apparently favors the Wildcats. Iowa, Michigan, and Ohio State are not scheduled. Purdue on its own court looms as the strongest of the remaining foes, although Indiana is more or less an unknown quantity and Wisconsin is capable of causing no end of trouble at Madison. Minnesota also may snap out of its lethargy by the time Northwestern starts its series with the Gophers.

Reiff Is Outstanding.

Joe Reiff continues to lead the Big Ten in scoring with a total of 71 points. There probably is no doubt in the minds of the conference coaches that he also is the best all around player in the Big Ten.

"Reiff is a great player and he deserves rating with the best men of the conference of all time." Such was Dr. W. E. Meanwell's opinion Saturday night when he saw Reiff's offensive work which twice staved off rallies by Illinois. On each occasion Illinois came within a point of tying only to see Reiff break through for field goals.

Northwestern's team, of course, centers around Reiff, but its attack is effective because Culver, who scored 10 of Northwestern's 15 points in the first half against Illinois, Brewer, and Johnson always are dangerous. As a unit the quintet plays with a minimum of fouls. It also is the best foul-throwing team in the conference.

Free Throws Win.

Purdue tied Northwestern in field goals but lost, 35 to 28. Illinois outscored Northwestern from the floor, 11 goals to 8, but lost, 30 to 27. Illinois committed 18 personals to 9 and Northwestern made good in 14 of its 24 penalty shots. Reiff, who made 11 free throws in 13 attempts against Chicago, Brewer and Culver, are particularly effective from the 15 foot mark.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Art Coulter, youthful Blackhawk defense man, gave Chicago a victory last night when he employed football tactics to wade through the Ottawa Senators and score a goal in the final 25 seconds which gave the Hawks a 2 to 1 decision, their first of the year over the Senators.

The contest, exceptionally exciting throughout, was witnessed by 8,100 fans.

The Hawks showed at the outset they were not of a mind to conserve their strength for a record road trip calling for seven games in 13 nights, beginning in Montreal against the Maroons tomorrow night. They never skated faster in their lives.

The Senators were the first to score when Shields got through in the first period.

Rowdies Peril Players.

A noble maneuver by Romnes and March enabled the latter to tie the score early in the second period. Then the Hawks kept things lively until their efforts were rewarded in the last half minute.

The contest was marked by an outbreak on the part of the hoodlum element which has been getting bolder recently. So far no effort has been made to police the rowdy followers of the game, and the missile throwers have been increasing the heft of their projectiles till in one disturbance, entirely unjustified, last night, the safety of officials, players, and spectators in the lower flights was endangered.

The victory enabled the Hawks to gain on two of their other three rivals in the American division and sends them east four points back of the third place Boston Bruins and seven points back of the leading Detroit Red Wings.

Mr. Gardiner Is Surprised.

The Senators got their score in a rather surprising fashion. Shields was standing back of his own blue line in his customary defense position. A Hawk advance landed the puck against his stick, causing Shields suddenly to decide to do a little gliding for himself.

The Hawk cast apparently was waiting for Shields to pass to one of the forwards, but the young man had no such idea. He dashed past a couple of Hawk forwards and Capt. Graham to a point 20 feet in front of the nets. To all appearances Gardiner expected him to come a little nearer. Anyhow, Shields fired from 20 feet out and and the rubber shot into the nets.

Hawks Tie Score.

The Hawks tied the score at one all by a swell maneuver in 5:22 of the second period. Romnes got the puck near the center of the rink, crossed the blue line near the middle, then veered to the left boards. Doc carried it to the end curve, then passed it to March, who batted it home from a position in front of the cage.

There was much excitement in the seven minutes of the third period. In a melee at the nets, Romnes apparently put the puck in the twine, and it is certain that he placed Goalie Connell there. The goal umpire turned on the red light, signifying a goal, but the officials turned out the lights midst the protest of the Hawks and the noisy spectators.

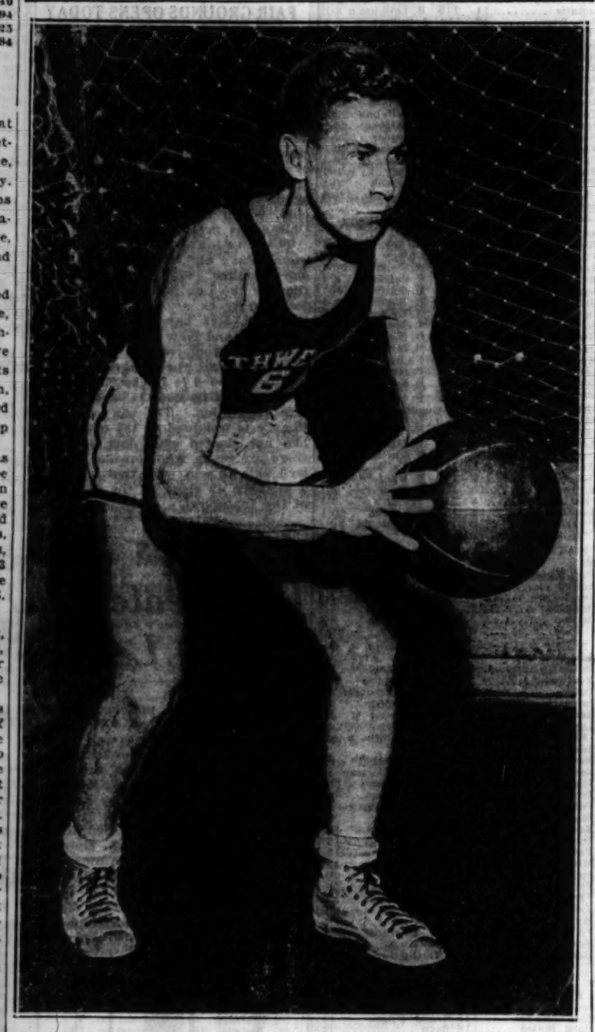
Chuck Gets Smacked.

Three decks of cards, a derby hat, a psalm book, and much debris were tossed on the ice, making necessary a considerable delay in the contest while the white wings worked.

Three minutes after play had been resumed there was another time out when Gardiner went down as a result of catching the puck on his left ear.

Twenty-five seconds before the third period ended the Hawks got the puck into the Ottawa defense zone and when Cook saw that he was headed off he passed to Coulter. Coulter, who had been throwing Senators right and left for several minutes, assayed another headlong rush and plowed through for the deciding marker.

CULVER FLIRTS WITH STARDOM



Nelson Culver is the man who sets the pace for Northwestern's basketball team when opponents concentrate their defensive efforts on Joe Reiff. Culver made 10 of Northwestern's 15 points in the first half of the Illinois game Saturday night.

GOLDEN GLOVES OFFERS NOVICES CHANCE TO WIN

The Golden Gloves novice boxing tournament, the first of its kind since Golden Gloves was inaugurated in Chicago six years ago, is a natural outgrowth of this meet which now has become the greatest amateur boxing tournament in the world and which has included an annual intercity series with New York's Golden Gloves winners and international fights with France and Germany in the last two years.

Golden Gloves was founded to encourage participation in a sport in which the competitor literally stands or falls by his individual merit. Six years ago, less than 300 boys entered the meet. The preliminaries were held in one hall. Last year nearly a thousand competed in Chicago alone.

Outstanding Boxers Developed.

In this period many amateurs have become proficient. Last year Chicago qualified three boxers for the final American Olympic trials and for the first time Chicago captured a national A. A. U. championship when Freddie Caserio won the 160 pound championship in New York finals. All of these boys have competed in Golden Gloves.

The directors of the Golden Gloves tournament realize that a novice boxer has practically no chance against these more experienced boys. This is particularly true in the heavier weights. Then, too, since Golden Gloves was expanded three years ago to include out of town centers, the competition has become keener. This year teams from 23 cities in five of the central states will enter the Tournament of Champions.

Rules for Novices.

Hence the novice tournament. Boys living in Chicago and adjacent towns in Cook, Du Page, and Lake counties are eligible. They must register with the Central association of the Amateur Athletic union as certificate of their amateurism, and they must be at least 16 years of age. The only requirement concerning previous experience is the following rule, which appears in the entry blank:

Novices are those amateur boxers who have not won more than one bout in any Golden Gloves tournament, in any Catholic Youth tournament, or in any Central A. A. U. tournament.

This means that those boys who entered last year's Golden Gloves tournament and won one bout but lost in their next are considered novices unless, of course, they competed in the Catholic Youth or Central A. A. U. meets and won at least one bout. These boys will be grouped in four Chicago sections. The novices will fight each other and their bouts will be fitted into the schedule of matches in the Open division.

Novice Finals to Be March 1.

Eight boys, one in each weight class, will qualify from the four sections. Thus 32 novice boxers will compete in the semi-finals and finals which will be held in conjunction with the Tournament of Champions at the Chicago Stadium Feb. 27, 28, and March 1. Eight semi-finals will be held on Feb. 27. Eight semi-finals will be held on Feb. 28. The eight novice championships are scheduled on March 1. Suitable prizes will be awarded the champions and the runners-up.

At the same time in the Tournament of Champions the Chicago qualifiers in the Open division will fight against boys from 23 towns. The eight Catholic Youth champions of 1933 also will be admitted to this competition. On March 1, 32 boys will qualify for the semi-finals and finals of the Open division, which will be held at the Chicago Stadium March 3.

Map Shows Sections.

Elsewhere in today's TRIBUNE is printed a map of Cook, Lake, and Du Page counties showing the four sections of the Chicago qualifying tournaments. Boys residing in Will county must compete in the Joliet, Ill., sectional. Those living in Lake county, Ind., should compete at Gary, Ind., although if the boxers live nearer the Chicago sectional which will be held in Roseland at 110th and State streets, permission will be granted to compete there.

The date for closing the entries in the Chicago sectionals are printed in the blanks. Clip the proper blank and mail it to Wilfred Smith, sports department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Cochran's Victory Brings on 3-Way Tie for Billiard Lead

BY FRENCH LANE.

The old time billiard fans will peer out through their specs this morning and more than likely will begin to wonder if they can believe their own eyes.

While they study the dope on the first week's play of the world's championship three cushion tournament they will discover that the fight for the most cherished of all cue titles has developed into a bitter three way tie. The thing that will disconcert them most will be that the three names up at the top of the standings are names they never expected to see there. Then they will go on through the list and find the names of all their old time idols down at the bottom.

Cochran Whips Reiselt.

The old timers more than likely will be so disturbed at the situation by this time they will demand a recount. Yet Cowboy Weston, who is the official scorer, will come right up with the figures in black and white to show 'em that something terrible has happened to the old guard in this three cushion billiard game.

The battle for the title became a three way tie last night when Welker Cochran, the former balk line champion, defeated Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, 50 to 46. He went all around the table for a perfect hit on a natural, to score his winning point in the first half of the 61st inning.

When Cochran clicked off the winning point he tied Jay Bozeman, a fellow Californian, the youngest three cushion star in the world. He also went into a tie with Clarence Jackson of Detroit. Each has won three games without encountering a defeat.

Stars Near Bottom.

The old timers never expected to see the names Bozeman, Cochran, and Jackson at the top in a championship struggle. Neither did they expect to see Augie Kleckhefer, the present world's champion, down on the list, and they didn't think Johnny Layton would be so far back in the ruck. To discover that Otto Reiselt, the runner-up last year, is on the botton with no victories and four defeats will be an absolute shock to the fellows who were beginning to think they knew something about three cushion billiards.

Cochran's victory over Reiselt last night before one of the largest Sunday night crowds in the history of the tournament demonstrated beyond all doubt that he is playing three cushions every bit as cleverly as he played balk line when he became famous at that game. He started his attack against the nervous Philadelphia veteran with 10 billiards in the first three innings. Reiselt could make but one during that time.

From then until the finish Cochran was always in front. Reiselt staged a spectacular rally beginning with the 57th inning when he scored a lucky "kiss" shot. He went into the 60th inning with the score 49 to 42 against him. Then he played his best billiards of the night. He got a run of four, all hard shots, but missed the fifth billiard by the narrowest of margins. The score was 49 to 46. Reiselt had left Cochran an easy natural and the balk line star made it.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 22.—The Milwaukee Deutscher Sports club today suffered its first soccer football defeat in two years of amateur competition. The local team was eliminated by the Jugo-Slavs, a Chicago professional team, 1 to 0, in the first round for the National Challenge cup. The game was played in six inches of mud on Bayern field.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The Chicago Macabee All Star soccer team rallied to tie the Sons of Malta 2 to 2 in the first round of the national challenge cup competition today after trailing, 2 to 0, in the second period. After 30 minutes of overtime play neither team was able to break the deadlock.

George Courbrough and Dick O'Donnell scored for the Maccabees. The game was played on a wet, soggy field. The game probably will be replayed in Chicago next Sunday.

Tolan, Saling Are Put on All-Star Team

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Eddie Tolan, Leo Sexton, and George Saling, Olympic champions all, and Joe McCluskey, America's leading distance runner, are outstanding performers on the all-American track and field team selected by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union.

Tolan, in the sprints, Saling in the hurdles, and McCluskey in cross country and steeplechasing, draw two places each while Big Leo, Olympic champion in the shot put and national champion in the 35 pound and 56 pound weight throws, draws three places.

Beard Is Displaced.

Ferris selected his team both for metric and yard distances, the first time he has used the metric systems in the annual ratings, picking Tolan for the sprints at metric distances and Ralph Metcalf of Marquette, the national champion, for the 100 yard dash.

Percy Beard, the only athlete to gain two places on last year's team, loses his 120 yard high hurdle place to Saling, but is retained for the 70 yard hurdles, at which distance he won the indoor title.

Pollard Gets Place.

Ferris also selected an all-college team and all-scholastic team. Metcalfe, a newcomer to the college team, is the only athlete to gain two places, being selected for both the 100 yard and 220 yard dash.

J. Miller of Des Plaines, Ill., in the quarter mile, Fred Pollard of Senn High school, Chicago, in the 120 yard high hurdles, and Bange Burnett of Libertyville, Ill., in the discus, are members of the scholastic team.

Cohn Wins Miami Beach Winter Net Championship

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Jay Cohn of Santa Monica, Cal., and Chicago, won the Miami Beach winter tennis championship today by defeating Hudson Hamm of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., public courts champion, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1. Cohn and his doubles partner, Judge Beaver of Atlanta, however, lost to Carroll Turner and Gus Feuer of Miami, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-3.

NEVERS' ELEVEN BEATS PACKERS ON COAST, 13 TO 6

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Ernie Nevers' Pacific Coast All Stars, a team assembled and coached the last two weeks, defeated the Green Bay Packers, national professional football league eleven, 13 to 6, today.

Led by Nevers, former Stanford full back, the coast boys passed their way to victory.

Red Grange, former Illinois star and a member of the Chicago Bears, opened at left half for the Packers and played about 15 minutes, but did not have much success. He carried the ball five times for a total loss of four yards.

The game, sponsored for charity by the Knights of Columbus, drew a crowd of 20,000. After a scoreless first period, the Packers went into the lead with a touchdown early in the second quarter. Clark Hinkle, former Bucknell full back, passed 26 yards to Tom Nash, right end, and the latter ran 20 yards to score. Groye's place kick on the try for point was low.

The All Stars followed with a touchdown and added the extra point to go into the lead in the same period. Bunnie Belden, sub left half, passed 30 yards to Harry Ebding, end, and the latter jogged five yards to the goal. Nevers place kicked the extra point.

Near the close of the third quarter, the All Stars scored again, Nevers throwing a seven yard pass to McKalip, left end, who ran ten yards. The try for point failed.

Outplayed for all of the third period and for most of the last quarter, the Packers put on a drive in the closing minutes that saw them lose the ball on downs on the Stars' seven yard line after a march of 80 yards.

Hockey Results

Montreal Maroons, 5; New York Rangers, 0.

Phagan Signs to Box Vernon and Weinert

Johnny Phagan, former Golden Gloves welterweight champion, yesterday signed for two bouts. He will meet Bobby Vernon in the six round windup at Kid Howard's gymnasium tomorrow night. On Feb. 3 he will box Puggy Weinert of Brighton Park at the Cicero stadium. Weinert is a Chicago boy, but he has done almost all of his fighting in Florida and Georgia.

The Phagan-Vernon match replaces the bout between Jack Moran and Bill Hall. Moran wasn't available, due to a 60 day suspension by the Illinois athletic commission for refusing to box Young Terry at the Coliseum a month ago.

Sammy Wolff plans to present a show at the Coliseum on Feb. 17. Barney Ross and Billy Townsend, who were matched to clash at the Chicago Stadium on Jan. 27, only to have the bout canceled, have agreed to battle for Wolff. Townsend is in Toronto, where he will fight Eddie Ran Feb. 3.

Four bouts at six rounds and one at four rounds are being arranged to support the ten rounder between Varias Milling and Paul Dazzo at the Washington Boulevard Masonic temple on Feb. 6. Solly Dukelsky and Harry Schuman may meet in a six round bout. Schuman whipped Dukelsky in a previous match. The four round contest probably will bring together Danny Neenan and Leo Ranieri.

An amateur boxing show will be presented by Keystone lodge No. 639 at the Medinah Athletic club tomorrow night. Proceeds will go to charity.

An amateur tournament in four divisions will be offered tonight at Marigold Garden, Broadway and Grace street. There will be two matches in the middleweight, welterweight, lightweight, and featherweight classes. Joe Margetic and Charles Stevens also will appear in a wrestling exhibition.

Jackie Parker, Terre Haute middleweight, will be after his fourth consecutive victory tomorrow night when he meets Bobby Groshek of Gary, Ind., in the six round windup of a weekly professional show at the Midway arena, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue.

GRANT BOWLER, SOX PITCHER, IS SENT TO DALLAS

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Bob Tarleton, business manager of the Dallas Steers, today announced the acquisition from the Chicago White Sox of Grant Bowler, husky right handed pitcher, in completion of the transfer of players in the deal for George Murray, Steer mound ace. Bowler was signed by Chicago in 1931 as a free agent. He was kept on the roster all of that season and most of 1932, being sent to the Mission club of the Pacific Coast league the latter part of the season.

DUBLIN'S LAD IS HAVANA VICTOR OVER JAZ AGE

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Jan. 22.—J. E. Smallman's Dunlin's Lad, a 5 year old chestnut son of Dunlin and Suppress which had not started since last August, triumphed easily today in the Verado purse, best event on an all-claiming program at the Oriental Park race meeting.

Rated behind the leaders by Jockey Burns during the early stages, Dunlin's Lad charged through the stretch to beat William Hinphy's Jaz Age by three lengths. The latter just saved the place by a nose from E. D. Slavin's Overboard.

A 30 to 1 shot showed the way in the third race, a 5½ furlong sprint for older horses. The A. and A. stable's Dick Weidel, which finished no better than third in 26 starts last year, won under a strong ride by R. Watson. The Fordham stable's Glenmie ran second and Miss L. Jardon's Gradiset third.

Dick Weidel also paid 10 to 1 to place and 5 to 1 to show.

FAIR GROUNDS OPENS TODAY

New Orleans, La., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Eight thoroughbreds of three years and upward, including last year's Louisiana derby winner, Lucky Tom, have been named for the Inaugural handicap, opening day feature here tomorrow at the old Fair Grounds course. Formerly under the control of E. R. Bradley, the famous racing ground will be under the new management of the Crescent City Jockey club, which has John C. Schank of Chicago as president.

The meeting will continue for 48 racing days and will be featured by eleven stakes. The most important of these is the Louisiana Derby. Other featured races are the Ponchartrain handicap, Rex handicap, Mardi Gras handicap, and New Orleans handicap.

The field tomorrow is considered a good one, and the victory is by no means conceded to Lucky Tom despite the fact that he has the most impressive reputation. The son of Master Charlie is weighted at 126 pounds. He has not started since last July, but there are many who consider the colt well able to win with that imposit at a distance as short as the 6 furlongs of the Inaugural.

MARBURY RITES TOMORROW IN N. Y. CATHEDRAL

Governor, Other Notables to Attend Funeral.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Funeral services will be held in St. Patrick's cathedral at 10 a. m. Tuesday for Elisabeth Marbury, 76, theatrical producer and the first Democratic national committeewoman from New York, who died early today of acute dilation of the heart.

At the direction of Cardinal Hayes a special mass will be celebrated at 8 a. m. tomorrow by Msgr. M. J. Lavelle, the pastor. Msgr. Lavelle will celebrate a high mass of requiem. Burial will be private in Woodlawn cemetery.

Prominent Democratic national, state, and city officials will attend the funeral. Mayor John P. O'Brien will head the list of honorary pallbearers and it is expected that Gov. Herbert Lehman and other state officials will attend. The Tammany Hall executive committee will attend in a body.

Active, until the end, Miss Marbury, who forsook a social career early in life to establish an agency for playwrights, had visited her office almost daily. Last June she went to Chicago to attend her third successive Democratic national convention as a delegate.

Her first active work in politics was in 1915, when she joined the governorship campaign of Alfred E. Smith.

Although an advocate of temperance, Miss Marbury had attacked the Volstead act as early as 1922, when she invited Lady Astor and others to debate the law's merit with her. Lady Astor declined.

In commenting on experiments conducted in Berlin a few years ago which were intended to show that the use of alcohol fostered the birth of males, Miss Marbury denied that feminists were seeking that means of eliminating males, saying:

"If it were not for the male population what would we women have to laugh at?"

Volunteered for World War.

A veteran trans-Atlantic voyager, Miss Marbury was in France when the world war began and she immediately volunteered for relief duty. With the entry of the United States into the war she returned to New York and became a member of the mayor's committee of national defense.

For her services in the war she was decorated by the United States, Belgium, and Italy.

As a producer she was associated with "Little Lord Fountleroy," "Nobody Home," "Love of Mike," "Very Good, Eddie," and "Say When."

At one time she acted as manager for Vernon and Irene Castle, Cissie Loftus and other stars.

CAPITAL POLICE WAR ON CRIME; WATCHMAN SLAIN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Washington police force hardly had readjusted schedules to conform with an order for 400 additional men on night duty as a result of a succession of holdups and shootings before the body of another victom was found today beside a looted safe.

William Simms, 60, Negro watchman of a coal and feed company, was found beaten or shot to death at his post. His outer clothing and revolver were gone and the firm's safe was broken open.

Impetus was given to the added police patroling when the resigning paymaster of a painting company working on the new house office building was shot fatally Friday and another employé wounded.

As a result of today's holdup fatality another police order went out requiring the day force to report back after dinner for duty until midnight. The augmented force was planned until there is a letup in the robbery wave.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Dowse Marcy of Evanston will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel at Graceland cemetery.

Mrs. Marcy, who was 102 years old last Aug. 15, died Wednesday in her home at 1327 Lake street, Evanston. She had been active up to the day before her death, which was caused by heart disease. A daughter, Mrs. C. B. Kinley; a granddaughter, Mrs. J. Harold Puster, and a great-granddaughter, Miss Marcya Puster, all of Evanston, also survive.

Mrs. Marcy was born in 1830 at Werton, near Bath, England. She came to the United States in 1856 and had lived for the last 40 years in the Chicago vicinity. Her husband, William W. Marcy, a real estate broker, died in 1909.

EDWIN GRUHL, UTILITY HEAD, IS DEAD AT 46

Burial to Take Place in Milwaukee.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Edwin Gruhl, president of the North American company, one of the largest public utility holding companies in the United States, died suddenly tonight of coronary thrombosis at his residence, 975 Park avenue. Services will be held Tuesday morning. Burial will take place at Milwaukee, where he was born 46 years ago.

The promotion of Mr. Gruhl to the presidency of the North American company last April marked the climax of a continuous service with that organization that began nearly 21 years ago. In 1914 he was made assistant to the president, in 1920, vice president, and the following year, the post of general manager was added to his duties. He was an officer or director of more than thirty corporations.

He made an intensive study of public utilities; first, as a member of the engineering department of the Wisconsin state railroad and tax commission, and as a statistician. His ability soon manifested itself after he joined the North American company.

Mr. Gruhl was a son of Fred J. and Emma Shroeder Gruhl. He received his B. A. degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1908. In 1924 he married Helen E. Way of Milwaukee, who survives, as does his mother, a resident of Milwaukee.

Friends said Kathleen's mother is dead and her father was unable to give her the care he desired for her.

This was so indefinite that all the Fishers in the neighborhood had to be telephoned before the child's relatives were located.

'No Gentleman,' She Says of Bandit Who Slapped Her

Berkeley, Cal., Jan. 22.—(AP)—"No gentleman" was the description Miss Ruth Bertson, chain store cashier, gave police of a young robber. She simply ignored the pistol in his hand and slapped his face, Miss Bertson said. He slapped right back, she declared, and knocked her down. Then, without so much as "pardon me," he took $10 from the cash drawer and departed.

GEIL—Jacob Geil,

CHEAP DOLLARS CALLED BLOW TO WAGE EARNERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—Assertions frequently heard that "big bankers" secretly desire inflation is denied by the bankers, if by inflation is meant any of the schemes lately under discussion in Washington and around the fringes of Wall Street.

If, however, inflation is used in the sense of an expansion of bank credit, increased velocity of turnover in bank deposits, rising prices, and a general quickening of trade, bankers say they are decidedly for it.

What Bankers Oppose.

The point that is repeatedly made in banking circles is that none of the vague proposals for reducing the gold content of the dollar, issuing fiat money, or otherwise devaluing the currency would achieve the end desired by their proponents. The established machinery for credit expansion, the federal reserve system, seems to be completely ignored in political discussions of the problem.

There is even some danger it is declared that the progress thus far made by the federal reserve in its credit expansion program may be jeopardized by the revolt within its ranks, openly avowed in the Chicago district, against the extremely easy money conditions that the reserve's policy has created.

Where Inflation Strikes.

The bankers say experience has shown devaluation of the currency invariably strikes hardest at the wage earner who finds his weekly stipend has a lower purchasing power each time he gets it. He never can catch up with the progressive depreciation of the currency.

The bankers probably would fare much better, it is contended, while currency depreciation would tend to reduce the value of their holdings of government and other bonds, that would be offset by the fact that deposits would be repayable in the depreciated money. Collateral on which loans were based would increase in money value, at any rate the banks in European countries were unhurt until the inflation collapsed.

Ample Funds at Hand.

Actually there is, the bankers point out, no shortage of currency or bank credit. The volume of money in circulation as of last Wednesday was $5,602,000,000; That was $543,000,000 higher than the largest figure reported in the boom year of 1929. The total volume of federal reserve bank credit outstanding on Wednesday was $2,668,000,000, or $345,000,000 above the highest figure reported in 1929.

The volume of member bank reserve balances, which form the basis of member bank lending power, was on Wednesday only $63,000,000 less than the highest figure for 1929 and substantially higher than it was on the corresponding date of the boom year. The excess of member bank reserves over their requirements is more than $600,000,000, the greatest excess on record.

Currency and Credit Idle.

The trouble, bankers say, is neither lack of currency nor lack of credit, but the failure of this currency and credit to be put to use. This they ascribe to lack of confidence more than to any other fact. Congress has it within its power, the bankers contend, to secure the advance in prices and the quickening of business it desires by taking steps to restore confidence. This implies the early accomplishment of such tasks as the balancing of the budget and the settlement of the war debts problem.

Grain Corp. Advances Sales Date for Coffee

The New York office of the Grain Stabilization corporation announced today that due to an indicated shortage of spot supplies of desirable grades of Santos coffee the opening of bids against 63,000 bags of the corporation's holdings would be advanced from Feb. 1 to Jan. 25. Delivery of such coffee as is sold will not be made before Feb. 1.

GRAIN TRADERS FIND POLITICS WHEAT FACTOR

Some See Brighter Price Prospects.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Stronger feeling is developing in the world's wheat situation. It is said by leading operators that should the political situation improve, there is the foundation for large speculators and investors to come into the market to advance prices. The crop situation in the southwest is looked upon as likely to be the leading feature.

As long as there is uncertainty as to what congress will do with the allotment plan and other agricultural bills, leaders in the wheat market are disposed to go slowly.

The speculative buyers who came into the market two weeks ago and carried prices up 8 cents from the season's low have practically sold out. Leaders of the upturn have taken profits.

Prices reacted 5c from the recent high level. Talk of inflation or of deflation of the currency is a most disturbing factor.

Market Ripe for Advance.

Leading traders say that otherwise the situation is ripe for a good advance in wheat. There is an abundance of idle money in the hands of speculators who believe wheat is a purchase at the present level.

They are waiting, however, until the crop damage in the winter wheat area of the southwest is more pronounced.

One of the largest operators says United States wheat markets have been on a domestic basis for two years and that it is likely to continue as long as prices are held above a world's parity. With a short winter wheat crop, however, and a greatly reduced spring wheat production, as well as large speculative buying, prices should advance 10@15c, and hold that appreciation. This would bring buyers into corn, oats, rye, and barley and should advance prices 5@10c and possibly more, depending upon the crop outlook. An advance of 5@10c a bushel in corn would be one of the best things that might possibly happen to farmers, as it would put prices to a level where they would have a small profit and a little money to meet mortgages and buy supplies. It would also create a better feeling in all lines.

Southern Hemisphere Shipping.

Canada, Argentina and Australia are supplying importing countries of the world with their wheat at the lowest known prices. All are shipping at about their maximum. They are expected to continue that for 30 days more. It's their custom. Combined surpluses of Argentina and Australia are 315,000,000 bu. Of that total there now remain 280,000,000 bu compared with 272,000,000 bu last year. Australia has shipped more wheat than in other years. Canada's final production figures were given at the close of the week, aggregating 428,000,000 bu. Of that amount 408,000,000 bu were in the three western provinces.

If Canada has exported 300,000,000 bu this season, home consumption and wastage might use 125,000,000 bu. The carryover on Aug. 1, this year, would not be any greater than last year as estimated by the Uhlmann Grain company. It also must be considered that last year's carryover was extremely large, 127,000,000 bu, but they are looking forward to a possible reduction of acreage due to low prices which also applies to the Southern Hemisphere where, for the first time, they are suffering from an exceedingly low level, says Mr. Uhlmann.

Wheat Lower for Week.

May wheat in Chicago closed Saturday at 47c to 46¾c; July 47c, and September 47¾c, showing net losses of ⅛c to ¾c after a 2 cent range for the week. July and September wheat are selling unusually close to the May and are considered the best investment. Prices for the week follow:

Call Corn Mart Oversold.

A visible supply of 29,664,000 bu of corn was reported a week ago compared with 12,508,000 bu a year ago. Open interest in corn, representing speculative holdings and hedges in all interests at the close of the week was 82,480,000 bu compared with 82,129,000 bu a week ago. This is taken as especially significant by operators who consider that the market is heavily oversold. There are large stocks back in the country, however, which would be marketed freely were prices to advance 5 to 10c a bushel.

May corn closed at 26½ to 26¾c; July, 27⅞ to 28c; and September, 29c, showing net losses of ⅛ to ¾c for the week. Prices for the week follow:

Oats and Rye Decline.

For the first time this season No. 2 white oats sold at May price to ¾c under. Country movement is small and cash interests take the offerings. May closed at 17⅛c and July 17¾c@17½c, or ¼c lower for the week.

Eastern buyers of rye have ceased taking the May and selling the May wheat against it at 12@13c premium for the wheat. Speculative buying otherwise is light. Cash lots were around May price to ¼c over.

U.S. Will Float 250 Million Five Year Loan

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—Secretary of the Treasury Mills announced today that the treasury will float a 280 million dollar five year 2½ per cent note issue on Feb. 1.

Proceeds from the new issue will retire a 145 million dollar treasury certificate issue which matures Feb. 1 and will furnish in addition 105 million dollars of new funds to add to the 330 million dollars cash balance which the treasury has on hand and out of which it meets running expenses and the needs of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Principal among the demands on the new money will be a $13,000,000 interest payment on the public debt which comes due Feb. 1, Secretary Mills said. The Reconstruction Finance corporation estimates that it will need most of the remaining $92,000,000, leaving the treasury with practically its present cash balance to carry it through until income taxes are collected on March 15.

Debt Near 21 Billion.

Increasing the outstanding public debt by the amount of new borrowing which it includes, the note issue will bring the total debt up to about $20,910,600,000, treasury records show. It will not add proportionately to the interest charges, however, because the certificates which will be retired bear a rate of 3¾ per cent.

By issuing a note instead of a certificate issue the treasury tied its refinaning in with the open market operations of the federal reserve banks. During their campaign of selling government securities in the last two weeks the reserve banks have sold $91,000,000 of treasury bills and certificates, but at the same time have bought $18,000,000 of treasury notes, thus building up the market for the present new offering. The decision to handle the open market operations and the refinancing in this way probably was reached when governors of the federal banks were in Washington two weeks ago.

The Feb. 1 refinancing is the last which Secretary of the Treasury Mills and his staff will do. The next large maturity, 660 million dollars of certificates, comes due on March 15, eleven days after the new administration takes over. Mills may plan the refinancing, but his successor will execute it.

In Bearer Form.

The new notes, which will mature on Feb. 1, 1938, will be issued in bearer form only and in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000, with interest coupons payable semi-annually attached, Secretary Mills explained.

The new issue, the secretary pointed out, will be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation except estate taxes now or hereafter imposed by the United States or any of its political subdivisions.

Applications for the new issue will be received by the federal reserve banks, and the treasury will accept as exchange subscriptions the certificates which mature on Feb. 1.

COHU ELECTED NORTH AMERICAN AIR LINE DIRECTOR

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Lamotte T. Cohu, who last fall contended with E. L. Cord in a proxy fight for control of Aviation corporation, has been elected a director of North American Aviation, Inc.

The proxy contest which developed from the proposal of the Aviation corporation management to acquire control of North American Aviation, led to various changes in the official personnel of the former, including Cohu's resignation as president. He continued as a director, however.

Wall street heard today that Cohu and some associates had acquired a substantial interest in North American Aviation, but no further move is expected toward a consolidation of the two companies, the plan having been definitely dropped, according to well informed interests.

California National Bank May Be Reorganized

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 22.—(AP)—State and federal bank examiners worked here today checking assets of the California National bank and its subsidiary, the California Trust and Savings bank, taken over by the state banking department yesterday. Directors were reported considering immediate reorganization. Approximately 9,000 commercial accounts and 36,000 savings accounts of the California National were tied up. Combined resources of the bank and its subsidiary were given as $39,607,090, as of Jan. 1.

LETTERS

Chicago, Jan. 18.—I take my hat off to THE TRIBUNE for starting on these high class racketeers—receivers, lawyers and bondholders committees. They are worse than any beer gangster going. My "all" is tied up in real estate bonds; and when I receive their statements, I certainly see red. When the income goes down the expenses go up. I hope you keep up the good work for this racket has caused untold misery to innocent victims.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Your interesting articles on the excess fees collected by the receivers of defaulted properties are surely appreciated by the bondholders. I sincerely hope that you will continue these articles for the benefit of over 50,000 innocent investors.

ZOLTAN DICKER,

Chicago, Jan. 19.—In your articles of yesterday and today you comment on the slowness of the bar association in reporting on their investigation of foreclosures and receiverships. Could the public expect any condemning by the bar of its own leading members who are at the head of the committees and the leading members. I can cite you the largest law firms and supposedly the most ethical members of the bar who are the worst offenders. If the officials of H. O. Stone & Co. got 20 years they ought to get life.

TRADE SLUMPS OLD AS HISTORY, ECONOMIST SAYS

Provide Own Cures, One Group Avers.

Today the Chicago Tribune begins the publication of a series of 10 articles reviewing the attitudes toward the solution of the depression held by business leaders, financiers and economists in the United States today. The author, Reuben D. Cahn of the Chicago Tribune staff, is a former member of the economics faculty at Northwestern university.

BY REUBEN D. CAHN.

Somehow and some time, humanity will escape from the worst depression in the experience of the world. Those who are willing to give any weight at all to history, are driven to that conclusion. Since biblical days depressions have followed booms and have been followed by revival. For as long and in the same sequence, despond has succeeded exuberance, and has been followed by new hope. Business cycles are old stuff.

But large groups of our citizens are asking whether this is not the one time when history may not be taken as an infallible guide. And secondly, assuming that forces to bring about recovery will be automatically set up, should this worst of depressions be allowed to drift on to its own conclusion, perhaps some years hence? Or should some positive action now be taken to assure an early recovery from the depression? And if so, what?

These articles present answers to these questions obtained from representative American economists through correspondence, conversation, and an examination of their published statements. As might be expected, there was considerable divergence in the answers. Their answers, together with the views, attitudes, and policies of a number of political and business leaders, are presented in this series of articles under convenient classification heads.

Methods of Laissez Faire.

First are the do-nothings—the people who hold that the depression will find its own solution. To them, the solution for the depression is: "let nature take her course." To secure genuine and lasting recovery, let the government do nothing.

Always, they observe, we have emerged from depressions after the process of economic readjustment has proceeded sufficiently, and we shall do so again, they assure. The need, say they, is to allow the forces of competition freest possible play, and nature will provide a remedy. This group views with great satisfaction the progress that has been made in the deflation of stocks, bonds, farm products, salaries and wages, and real estate. This must go on further—possibly until every one who owes any money is put through the wringer. When the liquidation has run its course in the other groups of society, and among the other items in our environment, the upturn will come of its own accord, say the do-nothings.

Advocacy of doing nothing about the depression has not been exclusive with a few economists. A leading financial publication, the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, has consistently urged that the depression be allowed to wear itself out, unhampered by artificial measures to bring about recovery.

Prescribes Self-Cure.

"The remedy," says the editor of that publication, "is not in creating new credit facilities or by adding to the country's stock of currency nor yet by meeting together and resolving that there shall be no more deflation so-called, and that we are determined upon stabilization of values above the low level now prevailing and which we feel is causing great distress, as is undoubtedly the case. An adjustment to new conditions, an adjustment to the normal from the previous inflated basis, is necessary, and the process must continue until we attain the truly normal and genuine basis. By retarding or seeking to retard the process we only make matters worse."

TO THE EDITOR: Will you please advise me what course is being taken at this particular time to protect a home owner from foreclosure. Five years ago I bought a home from a private party for $8,500, paying $1,000 cash, the balance on a contract for $60 per month. I have been very prompt in all my payments, including taxes and interest, up to four months ago. Then at that time I was forced to request a reduction in payments, which privilege was granted for four months.

Now, this party demands full payment, which is impossible, due to unemployment. Two years ago I spent $2,500 remodeling the house, which makes my equity about $6,000 in all. I am making half payments each month, which is the very best I can possibly do. Please advise what can be done and what chances are in my favor.—R. A. C.

ANSWER: If at the time you purchased the property you had consulted an attorney a provision would have been made in the contract for you to receive a deed after a certain amount had been paid and at this time the title of your property would be recorded in your name. The outcome of your present difficulty rests entirely on the attitude of the contract holder. If you will furnish the name and address we will be glad to assist you to keep your house. State how much you can pay each month.

TO THE EDITOR: I have a brick bungalow for which I paid $9,500 with a $1,000 down payment. Two years ago I paid up the second mortgage of $2,100. All the street assessments are paid except one amounting to $65. I have been out of work and have rented the place and the income just about pays the interest on the first mortgage. I haven't paid 1930 taxes yet. What can I do about it? I don't want to lose my investment as I have a substantial equity. The first mortgage has ten years to run. If I were employed I could pay my 1930 tax bill.—M. A. R.

ANSWER: When property is sold for taxes, you have two years' time in which to redeem. The penalty rate on 1930 taxes has been given special consideration and today this amounts to 2½ per cent and increases each month. However, the penalty rate is cheaper than the rates charged by various loaning agencies. Special assessments in default are handled similar to general taxes. Many property owners are paying taxes on installments. If you are able to pay a portion of your taxes, say about one-fourth, we suggest you take the matter up at the county treasurer's office, County building, Chicago.

REPORT DISCLOSES WIDE RETRENCHMENT IN MUNICIPAL FINANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 22.—A nation-wide retrenchment in state and municipal expenditures is indicated in a report submitted by E. F. Dunstan of the Bankers Trust company, New York, before the winter meeting of the governors of the Investment Bankers' association of America.

While state and city bonds surpassed all other classes of securities in volume of new issues disbursed last year, Mr. Dunstan, who is chairman of the municipal securities committee of the association, said there was a sharp decrease in the amount of such paper marketed in the United States as well as a drop in the rate of increase in this form of indebtedness.

States and municipalities issued from $1,000,000,000 to $1,400,000,000 in bonds annually from 1921 to 1931, he said, while only $807,000,000 of these securities were distributed to the public in 1932. The usual rate of redemption, resulting in the retirement of $500,000,000 each year, was maintained.

"The actual net increase in public issues of state and municipal bonds approximated $300,000,000 during 1932," Mr. Dunstan said, "an amount which compares very favorably with the rapid growth of such debts during the decade previous to last year."

Because of the widespread interest in and distribution of bank and insurance stocks the board authorized Frank M. Gordon of Chicago, president of the association, to appoint a committee to deal with this type of paper. Robert A. Gardner of Chicago was appointed chairman of a committee to select the place for the annual convention in October.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX REPORT $3,915,921 DEFICIT

Hart, Schaffner & Marx, clothing manufacturers and distributors, reduced their expenses by more than $1,000,000 last year and under an economy program, put into effect on Jan. 1, the company plans to reduce administrative overhead to approximately one-third of the 1929 figure.

This is set forth in the company's annual report signed by Mark W. Cresap, chairman, and Alexander M. Levy, president, which was issued yesterday.

The report shows a deficit of $3,915,921 on operations for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, 1932. This contrasts with a loss of $2,994,280 in the preceding fiscal year. Loss last year of the parent company was $2,332,777 after provision for depreciation, doubtful accounts and other charges. Loss of the subsidiary companies was $1,582,951. The deficit resulted in a reduction of surplus to $2,329,732 from $7,245,461 at the close of 1931.

Current assets at the close of the fiscal year were $7,664,514, including cash of $1,765,278, as compared with current liabilities of $461,696.

Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., wholesale hardware house, in 1932 operated at a loss after usual additions to reserves for the first time since the concern was incorporated on Jan. 1, 1884, according to the annual report made to stockholders by C. J. Whipple, president.

Placing the loss at $136,439, Mr. Whipple said: "Although drastic reductions were made in operating expenses, the amount was not sufficient to offset the effects of shrinkage in sales and decline in merchandise value." In 1931 the company made a net profit of $62,967.

Mr. Whipple said that during the year the company purchased holdings of treasury stock from surplus. He stated that, because of the decline in real estate values, an appraisal was made of the company's buildings, after which it was decided to write down the book value of land and buildings $1,315,226.

During the year $1.50 in dividends per share was paid out of undivided profit. Mr. Whipple stated that, in view of the company's cash position and the large balance in surplus and undivided profit accounts, the directors have decided to continue a monthly dividend of 10 cents per share for the first quarter in 1933. Future payments will depend upon later developments. The surplus on Dec. 31, 1932, was reported as $3,994,789, as compared with $5,648,486 on the same date in 1931.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—The Baldwin Locomotive works reports for 1932 a consolidated net loss after all charges, including depreciation reserves and deduction of loss accruing to minority stockholders, of $4,078,131. This compares with a loss of $4,122,759 for the previous year. Sales in 1932 amounted to $10,536,859, against $20,436,343 in 1931.

The consolidated balance sheet, which was not independently audited, shows total current assets as of Dec. 31 last, of $16,630,942 and current liabilities of $1,236,986. The three year 5½ per cent gold notes due on March 31, 1933, outstanding in the amount of $12,000,000 were not included in the current liabilities. The company recently announced a refinancing plan and is offering to the holders of these notes a new issue of five year 6 per cent consolidated mortgage bonds in exchange for their notes in equal principal amounts. At the close of 1931 current assets were $20,034,311, and current liabilities $1,921,335.

Surplus at the end of 1932 amounted to $13,112,055, compared with $17,329,634 on Jan. 1, 1932. Property, plant and equipment, thus reserved for depreciation, was carried at $32,089,881, against $53,834,967 at the close of 1931. Total assets at the end of the year amounted to $33,987,750, against $39,374,376.

SUCCESS OF DOLLAR DAY CONTRIBUTES TO UPTURN IN BUSINESS

A normal upturn at retail, aided especially by the highly successful results of Dollar day, scattered gains in the steel industry, a gain in local employment figures coincident with the new share-the-work movement, and an increase in the registration figures of new automobiles in Cook county, characterized the last week in Chicago, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Officials of loop retail establishments stated that Dollar day, the first unified day of its kind, was the most tremendous selling event they had ever sponsored. Great throngs of bargain hunters swarmed through the stores. As a result, retail sales totals reached a new high level. Employment was increased noticeably for the sale. In the basement of one store alone, there were over 1,300 people employed, of which 800 were extra, and even they had difficulty in waiting on the great numbers of customers.

Although continuing to move at a low level, a few bright spots appeared in the steel industry last week. Miscellaneous orders and a continuance of releases of automobile materials and tin plate were responsible for a further rise in steel ingot production.

CANNERS, GROCER GROUPS TO OPEN MEETINGS TODAY

A number of organizations important in the food industry will open conventions in Chicago today. At the Stevens hotel approximately 5,000 persons will attend the 26th annual convention of the National Canners' association and two allied organizations, the Canning Machinery and Supplies association and the National Food Brokers' association.

There will be an estimated 600 persons at the Congress hotel for the annual two day meeting of the National Wholesale Grocers' association. Some 300 wholesale executives, buyers, and store superintendents of the Independent Grocers' alliance will open a three day conference at the Medinah Athletic club, with J. Frank Gromes presiding. This group will attend the opening of the wholesale grocers' meetings at the Congress and then will hold their own sessions.

Marc C. Hutchinson of Fennville, Mich., president of the canners' association, and Silas Strawn will speak at the canners' meeting at the Stevens. Mr. Hutchinson is to discuss United States competition with private business, particularly the entry of the federal government into the canning business through the necessity of protecting loans it has made to canners.

Crossing U. S. in 15 Hours, Airline's Plan

BY HUGH SEXTON.

Competition between the three big transcontinental air lines for the largest share of the coast to coast air mail, passenger, and express traffic has developed into a struggle between groups of aeronautic engineers. Each group is trying to develop transport planes embodying the highest speed and the largest load carrying capacity.

The competition is acute between United Air Lines, which operates through Chicago, and Transcontinental and Western Air Lines, which operates through St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo. The third system, American Airways, plans to straighten its southern route, which is through Memphis and Dallas, to enter the struggle more actively.

Getting Faster Planes.

Faster equipment is being developed for all three systems. The United lines announced last May that 60 Boeing twin motor, low wing, all metal monoplanes [Wasp motors] able to cruise 155 miles an hour would be placed in service early this year. The planes are to carry ten passengers, two pilots, and 400 pounds of cargo. The first of the new transports will be completed this month, and all will be finished by June.

Transcontinental and Western Air lines announced the purchase of fifteen Northrup Delta single motor low wing all metal monoplanes [Wright motor], capable of cruising at 187 miles an hour. The planes will be delivered to the air line and placed in service on March 1. They will carry eight passengers, mail and express, or a total cargo capacity of 2,000 pounds.

The Northrup Delta planes will be equipped with wing flaps, and will be the first commercial air liners in the United States so equipped, according to Richard W. Robbins, president of the line. The flaps will increase their speed range to about four times the landing speed, which will be 48 miles an hour, and decrease the glide ratio from about 15 to 1 to about 5 to 1, increasing the safety factors, he said.

Coast to Coast 15 Hours.

With the new Northrup Deltas the Transcontinental system plans to reduce its coast to coast schedule to 15 hours, from west to east, and 17 hours from east to west. The new schedules for United Air lines have not been announced. American Airways is understood to be developing a new transport plane that will cruise at about 180 miles an hour, but the details of the plane are being guarded closely.

CANADIAN TRADE WITHIN EMPIRE GAINS DURING '32

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Canada's international trade in 1932 showed distinctly the influence of the imperial economic conference conducted in Ottawa last summer and the effect of the recent tariff legislation of some foreign countries, Harry H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, said in a statement today.

"Canada's trade has been strongly empireward during the last year," the minister asserted, "and particularly it showed that tendency from the opening of the imperial economic conference although the agreements reached did not begin to go into effect until the middle of November.

"Not only have Canada's exports to the United Kingdom increased heavily, but they have increased enough to make Great Britain the chief market of this dominion. It is a reversed situation. Prior to 1932 the United States was Canada's chief market. Canada's domestic exports to the United States in 1932 totaled $162,630,779, or $15,540,091 less than to the United Kingdom."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—As a result of a substantial reduction in the value of stock dividends from affiliated and subsidiary companies, the gross income of the Central States Electric corporation was insufficient to cover interest, discount, taxes, and expenses in 1932, according to the annual report just issued.

Gross income for the year was $2,355,811, of which $2,232,138 represented stock dividends taken up at the market prices of the record dates, and the deficit, before special appropriations, but after interest, discount, taxes, and operating expenses, was $80,119. In 1931 the value of stock dividends was $6,339,777, and gross income was $8,587,235. After charges, the gross profit was $3,805,570. After special appropriations the 1932 deficit was $2,312,258, against a deficit of $2,434,207 in 1931, when appropriations were substantially larger.

POLITICS CAUSES STOCK MARKET TO MOVE WARILY

Lame Duck Congress Seen Trade Brake.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—The stock market is trimming its sails more and more to the political winds that blow out of Washington as Inauguration day, with its train of uncertainties, draws near.

No progress whatever is being made—naturally. During the last week THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S composite averages fluctuated within a range of 3½ points and finished up within 34 cents of their Monday morning starting point. The predominating tendency was downward. Transactions for the six sessions amounted to only 3,917,807 shares, making it the slowest week since back in October. Neither bull nor bear seems willing to make a move of any consequence, with the future reclouded with so much doubt.

Lame Duck Congress.

The chief obstacle to price progress is generally concerned, of course, to be the obstructive policy of the "lame duck" congress. Traders have long since resigned to the conviction that the nation's so-called solons are bent on talking up the present session and the best that is hoped for is that March 4 will arrive without bringing any really harmful legislation—like inflation, say. Such matters as governmental economy, banking reform, budget balancing, and so on, obviously will have to await the extra session now expected to be called for about April.

Congress, however, is not the only political source of the market's current worries. Comment of the last few weeks has shown a growing concern in speculative circles over the policies of the incoming administration with regard to some of the major problems it will find confronting it.

Attitude on Economy.

Particularly would the street like to hear some authoritative enunciation that would furnish a clew to the President elect's economy program. Continued silence on this important matter is being exaggerated in some quarters as an indication that a prolonged period of "governmental indecision" may be in store after March 4. Some commentators have been at pains to rebuke the "unwarranted pessimism" being entertained on this score, but the misgivings continue to manifest themselves in more ways than one.

For the next week or so the community will keep its eyes focused on Warm Springs in anticipation of an announcement of the new cabinet which is to take over the different departments of national government and it may be that this development, when it comes, will have some effect toward jarring the market out of its lethargy.

Rail Traffic Gains.

Business still withholds the encouragement it had been counted on for hopes of a spring market rally. Railroad traffic shows some signs of improvement, but elsewhere the picture is about as drab as ever. The steel industry continues in a low state of operations, around 16 or 17 per cent of capacity, and prices for its products show an increasing disposition to soften. Further crude price cutting bears down on the oil industry and the trend in some raw materials slant ever downward, although wheat has been trying to rally and cotton succeeded in holding fairly steady.

Wholesale price indices made a show of bracing up about the middle of this month, but the improvement was too slight to justify any very great enthusiasm.

FRENCH ANNALS LIST FAILURE OF GRAIN CONTROL

Invoked to Prevent Famine; To Amass Gold.

BY ALEX SMALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 22.—An instance of the havoc that may be wrought in the agricultural economy of a country can be found in the annals of the highly paternalistic government of pre-revolutionary France. It was a royal procedure, for the king was supposed to be the father of his people. It was his duty to guide them as if they were children.

Almost to the beginning of the industrial era, the French government had one concern before its eyes—to avoid famine. The constant state of guerrilla warfare in the middle ages made famine almost the ordinary state of things, but even after France had been unified and pacified, acts of God would be sufficient to produce distress.

In the midst of the reign of Louis XIV., for instance, the winter of 1663-'64 was a terrible one, when bands of the starving roamed the countryside to dig up roots. On another occasion, fearing riots, the government opened markets of its own in Paris, where it sold at less than cost grain which it had imported from England and Germany.

Exports Forbidden.

To combat famine, general opinion of the time could conceive of but one remedy—forbid exportation. That meant not only exportation abroad, but exportation from one province to another within France, for, in spite of the strength of royal power, old France was much more loosely organized than the present republic. Provinces had a large measure of autonomy and could put up trade barriers against each other or even forbid trade altogether.

In 1661, for instance, grain needed for the army was ordered in the provinces of Guyenne, but the parliament of Bordeaux refused to allow the shipment. It required a formal order from the king's council and a threat of the use of force before the provincial legislators would yield.

With the ban on exportation there went, of course, price fixing. The scapegoat then, as always, was the speculator, against whom penalties might be as severe as hanging. Constantly in fear of the city mob and its volatile reactions, the royal government's first concern was to keep it pacified with cheap grain. To attain the end it was not above measures as demagogic as any imagined by an elected assembly.

Decree Against Futures.

"Whereas, we have been informed that many personages, through avarice and greed, having neither God, charity, nor the salvation of their souls before their eyes have bought great quantities of wheat—sometimes before harvest and whilst it was still green in the fields, sometimes out of barns—in other places than the public markets, in order to store it in granaries and to sell the same at their pleasure and wish, when they see the people in necessity;

"Have ordained that grains be carried to the public markets and sold there, and nowhere else, and that the common people be served first."

In the second half of the 17th century Colbert, the great minister of Louis XIV., tried to break down trade barriers between the provinces and he even desired to allow the free exportation of grain out of France. His motives were hardly pure. The selling of farm products abroad would, as he saw it, bring money into the country and he had the ambition to drain into France all the gold of Europe. His primary concern for the farmer, besides, was as taxpayer. If the farmer got the highest price for his produce he would be better able to pay the income tax (taille) which under the old régime fell almost entirely on peasants.

Operates Cautiously.

Colbert did not dare, however, to go through with his theory. He allowed exportation abroad from time to time, but only when the forecast of crops showed that the harvest would be abundant. Export licenses were then issued for three months or six months, rarely for a year. At the first sign of scarcity, the lid was clamped down again.

The government lacked the courage to run counter to ingrained notions and habits, but the clearest heads of the time saw the evil and protested against it. One of the first results of restricted trade and of price fixing was that people would no longer stay on the land, but came into towns to swell the hungry city mobs.

The situation in a year when no exportation was allowed was described by the Intendant [provincial governor] of Rouen [Normandy] in 1651: "Barns and storehouses are gorged with wheat, but the farmers get no money for it. It is difficult to find farmers. Cultivators do not want to renew their leases, and are flocking into the petty manual trades of the city. This is really a very bad state of things and it gives me considerable anxiety for the future."

Kills Initiative.

The one sure result of the attempts to avoid famine was to kill private initiative and thus to make the threat of famine perpetual. A good crop brought the farmer very little benefit, and he was not allowed to take advantage of scarcity. He therefore did nothing to improve his position.

French agriculture made practically not a single advance in methods for centuries, not until the export and price fixing laws were modified. The system in general use was a primitive one, bound to give a low yield. It was that of a three year cycle: The first year a field was sown with winter cereals [wheat, rye], the second year with spring cereals [oats, barley], and the third year it was allowed to lie fallow.

This system, poor as it was, was applied to the best lands only. Others were allowed to lie fallow two years out of three, or would be cultivated only exceptionally. In vain the government of Colbert tried to better cultivation and obtain a higher yield by giving away seeds, by having experts give the peasants lessons, and even at times by coercion.

GERMAN GRAIN SUPPLY ENOUGH TO FEED NATION

Imports Unlikely for First Time in History.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—Estimates of the federal bureau of statistics indicate that this year Germany for the first time will be able to meet its grain consumption by domestic production. Supplies still are so large that the old problem of how much grain shall be permitted to enter Germany seems to have been reversed. The authorities are facing the problem of how to get rid of the surplus through exports so as to prevent a collapse of prices.

Crop Abnormally Large.

Although the situation in 1932 was extraordinary, because there was an abnormally good crop and abnormally small consumption as a result of the diminished purchasing power of the population, this development marks an important turning point.

For many years it has been one of the chief objectives of German trade policy to cut down imports of farm products, especially grain, and the goal of agrarian self-sufficiency has been assiduously pursued by all governments.

In recent years there has been a gradual decline of the excess of consumption over domestic production. The excess consumption of rye, wheat, barley and oats declined from 1,566,000 tons in 1928 to 859,000 tons in 1929 and 13,000 tons in 1930. The consumption figures for 1931 have not been published but it may be assumed that they about equalized production. In 1932 there was a further increase in production, while consumption continued declining.

Domestic Supply Larger.

The stores of agrarian products still in the hands of farmers and grain dealers show a large surplus. Compared with the same time last year, the stocks of rye are about 1,500,000 tons larger, the stock of wheat 1,000,000 tons larger, and the stock of oats 450,000 tons larger.
